Call for Papers: PHILOSOPHY NOW Magazine.

1. Philosophy Now is a magazine designed to appeal both to specialists and to the general public. The majority of our readers have had no formal training in philosophy and contributors should write with them in mind.

2. Articles should be self-contained; it shouldn't be necessary for readers to look up references in order to follow what is being said. The one exception to this rule is for articles which form part of a debate conducted within the magazine.

3. Jargon. We're against it. If the use of technical terms is unavoidable, please include a brief explanation of their meaning within your article.

4. To help ensure maximum clarity, ask an intelligent, educated friend who knows no philosophy to read your article before you send it in and, if necessary, modify it in the light of his/her comments.

5. Articles should be between 1000 and 3500 words long, while book reviews should be of less than 1500 words. Please indicate exact number of words and include a short (50 word) abstract (just for filing purposes, not for publication).

6. Pictures. Any illustrations should accompany the manuscript but be separate from it. Photographs are welcomed too (ideally black and white prints).

7. Copyright on articles remains the property of the authors. Authors are free to publish their contributions again elsewhere, if Philosophy Now is acknowledged as the place of first publication.

8. Unfortunately, we are not able to pay authors for articles. However, all contributors whose work is published will receive a free subscription to Philosophy Now.

9. Wherever possible, articles will be vetted by referees competent in the relevant area of philosophy. However, the decision of the Editor to accept or decline papers for publication will be final, arbitrary, frequently unjust and utterly irrevocable.

Contributions should be sent to:

Call for Papers: JAC

JAC invites the submission of articles on a variety of topics related to writing, rhetoric, literacy, culture, and radical pedagogy. We also invite theoretical articles on multiculturalism and the politics of difference. JAC seeks to support crossdisciplinary conversation by publishing scholarship that finds in contemporary theory the language to ask new questions, to reframe existing problems, and to move beyond current impasses in thought and action. Also of interest are articles that make available a theoretical understanding of important professional issues in the classroom techniques, we do invite submissions on pedagogical theory. Please use current MLA style and send three copies, stripped of any identifying information, for blind review. Direct submissions and inquiries to: University of South Florida; Tampa, FL 33620-5550; (813) 974-9536; Lworsham@chuma1.cas.usf.edu.

Funding: The Rosenberg Fund for Children

The Rosenberg Fund for Children (RFC) is a public foundation that provides for the educational and emotional needs of children in this country whose parents have been harassed, injured, lost jobs, or died in the course of their progressive activities. Institutions and professionals are awarded grants to provide these children with services (school tuition, music lessons, summer camp, therapy, day care, travel to visit an incarcerated relative, etc.). Grants are given directly to institutions and individuals who cultivate positive human values, and foster children's physical, mental, emotional, and cultural development while recognizing that children must be free to be children. The RFC was founded by Robert Meeropol, the younger son of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, who was 6 years old when his parents were executed.

RFC beneficiaries include the children of: Judi Bari, the well-known environmental activist; Mumia Abu-Jamal, a political prisoner currently on death row in Pennsylvania; and Mary Pitawanakwat, an indigenous woman who fought against racial and sexual harassment in her workplace. (The RFC protects the anonymity of its beneficiaries, and mentions these individuals only with their consent.)

If you know of a child of a targeted activist who might qualify for an RFC grant, or for more information, contact the Rosenberg Fund for Children at rfc@rfc.org; www.rfc.org; 413-739-9020; or 1145 Main St. #408, Springfield, MA, 01103.

SWIP-L, an electronic mail list for feminist philosophers is the e-mail information and discussion list for members of the Society for Women in Philosophy and others who are interested in feminist philosophy. To subscribe to this list send the following one-line message: SUBSCRIBE SWIP-L <YOUR NAME> to: SWIP-L@listserv.uh.edu.. When you want to post messages on the list send them to the same address. The purpose of the list is to provide a place to share information about SWIP and other feminist philosophy meetings, calls for papers, jobs for feminist philosophers, etc., as well as to engage in more substantive discussions related to feminist philosophy. While the list is open to both SWIP members and non-members, it is meant for feminist philosophers and theorists. It is free of charge. The SWIP-L's "owner" is Cynthia Freeland. If you have questions please e-mail her at: cfreeland@uh.edu.
