

Activities

Michael Barnett, University of Wisconsin, has received funding from the Smith Richardson Foundation and the United States Institute for Peace to pursue research on power and pathologies in international organizations.

Mark Bessinger, University of Wisconsin, will be a visiting fellow at Harvard University's Davis Center for Russian Studies during the 1999-2000 academic year.

Gary W. Copeland, associate professor, department of political science, and associate director, Carl Albert Congressional Research and Studies Center, University of Oklahoma, has been elected president-elect of the Southwestern Political Science Association for 1999-2000.

James W. Davis Jr., assistant professor of international politics, Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München, accepted a four-year appointment to the associate editorship of the European Journal of International Relations.

Chun-tu Hsueh, president of the Huang Hsing Foundation and advisor to Churchill College of Cambridge University, accepted an invitation to serve as a trustee of Nanjing University.

Friedrich V. Kratochwil, professor of international politics, Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München, accepted a four-year appointment to the editorship of the European Journal of International Relations.

Herbert Kritzer, University of Wisconsin, will be a visiting scholar at the William Mitchell School of Law during the 1999-2000 school year.

Amy R. McCready, Bucknell University, was a visiting assistant professor in the University of Wisconsin's department of political science during the spring semester of 1999.

Gary Nordlinger, president, Nordlinger & Associates, has been elected secretary of the American Association of Political Consultants.

Tari Renner, department of political science, Illinois Wesleyan University, was elected to the County Legislature of McLean County, Illinois.

Aili Tripp, associate professor, department of political science and women's studies program, University of Wisconsin, will spend the 1999-2000 academic year doing research at the University of Helsinki.

Administrative Appointments

Frank R. Baumgartner, interim head, political science department, Pennsylvania State University.

Charles J. Barrilleaux, director, Survey Research Laboratory, DeVoe Moore Center for the Study of Public Policy, Florida State University.

David Canon, associate chair, department of political science, University of Wisconsin.

Jeanne Marie Col, interregional advisor, department of public economics and public administration, department of economic and social affairs, United Nations.

Dennis Dresang, chair, department of political science, University of Wisconsin.

Robert Booth Fowler, chair, Integrated Liberal Studies, University of Wisconsin.

James M. Glaser, chair, department of political science, Tufts University.

Janet R. Hutchinson, director, graduate studies program in public administration, Virginia Commonwealth University.

Kurt W. Jefferson, chair, department of political science, Westminster College (MO).

Lance T. LeLoup, interim director, Thomas S. Foley Institute for Public Policy and Public Service, Washington State University.

Leigh Payne, director, World Affairs and the Global Economy (WAGE) Program, University of Wisconsin.

FOR THE RECORD

Paul C. Light, current director of the Center for Public Service and Douglas Dillon Senior Fellow at The Brookings Institution, in September will succeed Thomas E. Mann as director of Governmental Studies at Brookings.

Paul C. Light

Mann, former Executive Director of APSA, will remain at Brookings focusing on research and writing on campaign finance regulation and the transition from campaigning to governing. In addition to his role as director of governmental affairs, Light has been named a vice president at Brookings and will serve as a key member of the institution's management team.

Thomas E. Mann

John R. Petrocik, chair, department of political science, University of Missouri; formerly, University of California, Los Angeles.

Dale L. Smith, chair, department of political science, Florida State University.

Donald Stewart, director, Carnegie Foundation (NY); formerly, College Board.

Graham Wilson, associate director, Robert M. La Follette Institute, University of Wisconsin.

John Witte, director, Robert M. La Follette Institute, University of Wisconsin.

Quansheng Zhao, has accepted appointments as director of the division of comparative and regional studies in American University's School of Public Service and as co-director of the university's Council of Comparative Studies.

New Appointments

David C. Barker, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Pittsburgh.

Gary Bass, assistant professor of politics and international affairs, Princeton University; formerly, Harvard University.

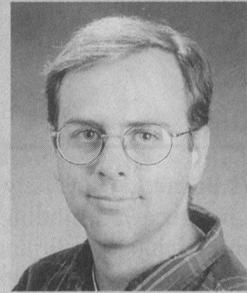

Adam Berinsky, assistant professor of politics, Princeton University; formerly, University of Michigan.

Thomas Brunell, assistant professor of political science, Binghamton University, SUNY; formerly University of California, Irvine and APSA Congressional Fellow.

Barry C. Burden, assistant professor, department of government, Harvard University; formerly, Louisiana State University.

DaMarys Canache, assistant professor of political science, Florida State University; formerly, University of Pittsburgh.

Richard N. Engstrom, a doctoral candidate in political science at Rice University, has received an NSF dissertation grant to continue his work on "Electoral District Structure and Political Behavior."

Mary E. Stuckey, professor of political science at the University of Mississippi, received the 1998–99 Elsie M. Hood Outstanding Teacher Award, which is given annually to the person Ole Miss students, faculty, and alumni select as the university's best teacher. Stuckey has been on the faculty at Ole Miss since 1987.

Gregory Calderia, a faculty member at Ohio State since 1987, has been named a Distinguished University Professor. Along with the title, he will receive an annual budget of $10,000 for three years to support his academic work. Calderia's research specialization is in judicial politics, with particular emphasis on interest groups and the Supreme Court.

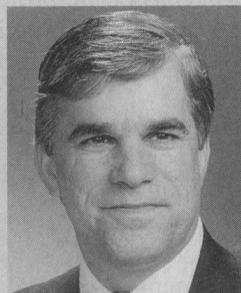

Aseema Sinha, a doctoral candidate at Cornell University, has accepted an appointment as an assistant professor in the department of political science at the University of Wisconsin, Madison effective Spring 2000. She is completing her dissertation "Divided Leviathan: Comparing Subnational Developmental States in India" under the supervision of Ronald J. Herring.

Christopher Z. Mooney has been named director of the Illinois Legislative Studies Center, located on the campus of the University of Illinois, Springfield. Until recently Mooney was on that faculty at West Virginia University where he taught and conducted research in the areas of U.S. state politics and policy and research methods. He received his Ph.D from the University of Wisconsin, Madison in 1990.

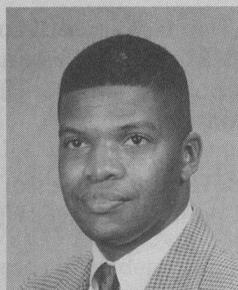

Susan MacManus, a professor in the department of government and international affairs, University of South Florida, has been appointed chair of the Florida Election Commission by Governor Jeb Bush, subject to Senate approval. The nine-member Commission is responsible for enforcing most of the state's Election Code, including campaign financing provisions.

Charles D. Kenney, assistant professor, University of Oklahoma, accepted a Fulbright Fellowship in Peru for the 1999–2000 academic year. During the months he spends in Lima, he will teach graduate courses at The Catholic University of Peru and prepare a study of the country's 2000 presidential and congressional elections.

Marion Orr has been appointed associate professor with tenure in the department of political science and the program in urban studies at Brown University. Orr most recently served on the faculty at Duke University after receiving his Ph.D. in 1992 from the University of Maryland. His current research focuses on race, politics, and school reform in large American cities.

John Kincaid, Robert B. and Helen S. Meyner Professor of Government and Public Service, Lafayette College, won the award for Best Paper presented at the 1998 annual meeting of the Urban Affairs Association for "De Facto Devolution and Urban Defunding: The Priority of Persons Over Places." He was also recently elected to a three-year term as president of the International Association of Centers for Federalism.

Linda Bennett, professor and chair of the department of political science at Northern Kentucky University, has accepted an appointment as dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Appalachian State University beginning with the fall 1999 term.

Kerry Chase, assistant professor, department of political science, Tufts University; formerly, University of California, Los Angeles.

John DiIulio, Fox Leadership Professor of Politics, Religion and Civil Society, University of Pennsylvania; formerly, Princeton University.

Erick Duchesne, assistant professor, department of political science, SUNY-Buffalo.

Jennifer Holt Dwyer, assistant professor, Hunter College, CUNY; formerly, University of Chicago

Jill Frank, assistant professor, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

Brad Gomez, assistant professor, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

Suzette Grillot, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Oklahoma.

Mark S. Hallerberg, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Pittsburgh.

Mark S. Hurwitz, assistant professor, department of political science, SUNY-Buffalo.

Eiji Kawabata, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Oklahoma.

Laura Langer, assistant professor of political science, University of Arizona.

Mark Lubell, assistant professor of political science, Florida State University; formerly, SUNY-Stony Brook.

Ellen Lust-Okar, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Mona Lyne, assistant professor, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

Stephen Macedo, Laurence S. Rockefeller Professor, department of politics and University Center for Human Values, Princeton University.

Edward McMahon, research assistant professor of political science, Binghamton University, SUNY; formerly United States Agency for International Development.

Renée de Nevers, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Oklahoma.

Jonathan Rodden, assistant professor, department of political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Mark J. Rozell, associate professor of politics, The Catholic University of America; formerly, associate director, University of Pennsylvania Washington Semester.

Anne Sartori, assistant professor of politics, Princeton University; formerly, University of Wisconsin.

Howard Schweber, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Wisconsin; formerly, Cornell University.

James D. Slack, professor and chair, department of government and public service, University of Alabama, Birmingham; formerly California State University, Bakersfield. Slack will also hold faculty positions in UAB's Center for AIDS Research, the School of Public Health, and the Lister Hill Center for Health Policy.

Mitchell Smith, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Oklahoma.

Dietlind Stolle, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Pittsburgh.

Jeffrey Taliaferro, assistant professor, department of political science, Tufts University; formerly, Harvard University.

Georg Vanberg, assistant professor of political science, Florida State University; formerly, University of Rochester.

Stephen M. Walt, Kirkpatrick Professor of International Affairs, John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University; formerly, University of Chicago.

Alan Wolfe, director, Center on Religion and American Public Life and department of political science, Boston College; formerly Boston University.

Promotions

David Canon, professor, department of political science, University of Wisconsin.

Cathy Cohen, associate professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Peter Dombrowski, associate professor with tenure, Iowa State University.

Donald Downs, Glenn B. and Cleone Orr Hawkins Professor, department of political science, University of Wisconsin.

Susan B. Hanson, professor, department of political science, University of Pittsburgh.

Christopher Howard, associate professor of government with tenure, College of William & Mary.

Janet R. Hutchinson, associate professor with tenure, Virginia Commonwealth University.

William G. Jacoby, professor, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

Kurt W. Jefferson, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Westminster College (MO).

Roger S. Karapin, associate professor, Hunter College, CUNY.

J. Patrick McSherry, associate professor, department of political science, Long Island University, Brooklyn Center.

Jeffrey J. Mondak, professor, Florida State University.

Jerel Rosati, professor, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

Bernard Rowan, associate professor with tenure, department of history, philosophy, and political science, Chicago State University.

James Simeone, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Illinois Wesleyan University.

Paul A. Tharp, associate professor, department of political science, University of Oklahoma.

Aili Tripp, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Wisconsin

Retirements

Steven L. Wasby, emeritus professor, department of political science, SUNY-Albany.

Visiting and Temporary Appointments

Michelle A. Benson, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, SUNY-Buffalo.

Sean Bolks, postdoctoral fellow in political economy, Binghamton University, SUNY; formerly Rice University.

Tracy R. Jarvis, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, SUNY-Buffalo.

James H. Mittleman, professor, School of International Service, American University, was a 1998–99 member of the School of Social Sciences at the Institute for Advanced Studies at Princeton University. He has also been reappointed Pok Rafeah Chair in International Studies and distinguished visiting professor at the Institute of Malaysian and International Studies, National University of Malaysia.

Awards

Hoover Institution Announces National Fellows for 1999–2000

Four APSA members were among the young scholars granted the opportunity to spend a year at Stanford University's Hoover Institution researching and writing about current or historical public policy issues. The recently named W. Glenn Campbell and Rita Ricardo Campbell Fellows are Torben A. Iverson, assistant professor, department of government, Harvard University; "Deindustrialization, Human Capital, and the Politics of Welfare State Design."

Nolan M. McCarty, assistant professor, department of political science, Columbia University; "Bargaining over Authority: Presidents, Congress, and the Separation of Powers."

Michael F. Thies, assistant professor, department of political science, University of California, Los Angeles; "The Electoral Determinants of Legislative Organization: Japanese Committees in Theoretical and Comparative Perspectives."

Suisheng Zhao, associate professor, department of government, Washington College (MD); "In Search of Grandeur: The Construction of Nationalism in Post-Mao China."

Midwest Recognizes Authors of Best Papers

At its 1999 convention, the Midwest Political Science Association recognized the following authors for papers delivered during the Association's 1998 convention:

Robert J. Franzese Jr., University of Michigan: Pi Sigma Alpha Award for the best paper, "Two Hands on the Wheel: Independent Central Banks, Politically Responsive Governments, and Inflation."

Ted Brader, Harvard University, and Joshua A. Tucker, Harvard University: The Westview Press Award for the best paper by a graduate student, "Congratulations, It's a Party: The Birth of Mass Political Parties in Russia, 1993–96."

Dean Lacy, Ohio State University: Robert H. Durr Award for the best paper applying quantitative methods to a substantive problem, "Survey Measures of Uncertainty on Candidate Traits and Issue Position."

Barbara Sinclair, University of California, Los Angeles: Patrick J. Fett Award for the best paper on the scientific study of Congress and the presidency, "Do Parties Matter?"

Nolan McCarty, Columbia University, and Rose Razaghian, Columbia

University: Patrick J. Fett Award for the best paper on the scientific study of Congress and the presidency, "Advice and Consent: Senate Responses to Executive Branch Nominations, 1885–1996."

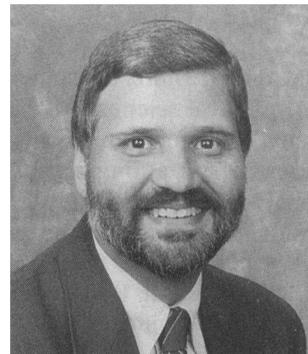

Woodrow Wilson Center Announces 1999–2000 Fellows

Two APSA members were among the 21 scholars receiving academic-year fellowships to conduct research at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars. They are

Alasdair S. Roberts, associate professor of public policy, Queen's University (Canada), "The Next Crisis

KUDOS

Paul Diehl, a professor of political science at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, who researches international conflict, international organizations, and international law, won the 1999 Campus Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching and the 1998–99 LAS Dean's Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching. He was also named "Distinguished Teacher/Scholar" by his university in 1999.

This is not the first time Diehl has been recognized for outstanding teaching. In 1991 and 1996, he was given the Clarence Berdahl Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching by the Illinois chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha.

Diehl, who also holds an appointment in the Program on Arms Control, Disarmament, and International Security, has published over 80 journal articles and book chapters, and his research has appeared in such outlets as Journal of Conflict Studies, Journal of Politics, American Journal of Political Science, and International Organization. His 12 books include War and Peace in International Rivalry (2000, coauthored with Gary Goertz), International Law (1998, coedited with Charlotte Ku), The Dynamics of International Rivalries (1997, editor), Measuring the Correlates of War (1990, coedited with J. David Singer), and Through the Straits of Armageddon: Arms Control Issues and Prospects (1987, coedited with Loch Johnson).

In 1998, Diehl received the International Studies Association's Karl W. Deutsch Award in International Relations and Peace Research, which recognizes an outstanding young scholar. He was also made an associate of the Center for Advanced Study at Illinois.

in Governance: Planning for Public Sector Reform in 2010.”

Kurt G. Weyland, associate professor of political science, Vanderbilt University, “The Politics of Neo-Liberal Reform in Fragile Democracies: Argentina, Brazil, Peru, and Venezuela.”

Other Awards

Michael Barnett, University of Wisconsin, was the recipient of a Vilas Associates Award from the university.

Patricia McGee Crotty, department of political science, East Stroudsburg University, received her university's Alumni Association's 1999 Great Teacher Award.

Robert Devigne, department of political science, Tufts University; won the university's 1999 Leibner Award for Teaching and Advising.

Nathan Edward Dietz, assistant professor of political science, American University, has been named winner of the Best Dissertation prize on the presidency, presented by the Center for Presidential Studies in the George Bush School of Government and Public Service at Texas A&M University.

Stephen J. Fransworth, assistant professor of political science and international affairs, Mary Washington College, was the recipient of the Mary W. Pinschmidt and the Richard Palmieri Outstanding Professor awards at the college's 1999 commencement. Both awards recognize excellence in teaching.

Anthony Gill, department of political science, University of Washington, received one of the university's distinguished Teaching Awards for 1999.

Randy Hagerty, division of social sciences, Truman State University, was recently named Educator of the Year at Truman State for the 1998–99 school year.

Paul Hutchcroft, University of Wisconsin, received an ACLS/SSRC NEH Postdoctoral Fellowship for the fall semester of 1999.

David Leheny, University of Wisconsin, has been awarded a Council on Foreign Relations International Affairs Fellowship for the 1999–2000 academic year.

Jeffrey J. Mondak, professor, Florida State University, won the university's 1998 Developing Scholar Award, which is given to scholars who are advancing rapidly in their careers.

Mark Pollack, University of Wisconsin, has been awarded a grant from the German Marshall Fund for calendar year 2000.

Andrew J. Polsky, associate professor, Hunter College, CUNY was awarded the Performance Excellence Award for excellence in teaching, research, and service.

Evan J. Ringquist, professor, Florida State University, won the university's 1998 Developing Scholar Award, which is given to scholars who are advancing rapidly in their careers.

Stephen Van Evera, department of political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, received his university's Frank E. Perkins Award, which is given annually to a professor who served as an excellent advisor and mentor to graduate students.

Bernard Yack, professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin, Madison has received a fellowship to spend the 1999–2000 academic year at the Swedish Collegium for Advanced Studies in the Social Sciences in Uppsala. Yack was also honored in 1999 with the Kellett Mid-Career Award, presented by UW-Madison.

Corrections

In the June issues of PS, Joyce Gelb was incorrectly noted as being a faculty member in the Women's Studies Program at Hunter College. While within the city limits of New York, Gelb is actually on faculty at the City University of New York's Graduate Program in Political Science. Bill Hall at Bradley University also pointed out that Charles Danneh was not promoted to associate professor in his department, but that Charles Dannehl was. And lastly Larry Aspin's middle initial is not actually S, it's really T. Sorry.