

People in Political Science

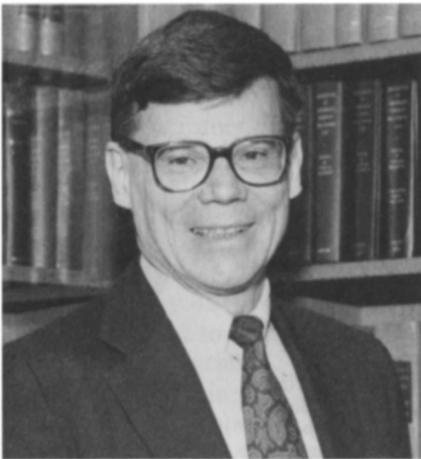

Activities

William P. Browne, Central Michigan University, has assumed the position of associate editor, handling review essays, of Policy Studies Journal, a journal of the Policy Studies Organization.

William Crotty, Northwestern University, was elected president of the Policy Studies Organization at the 1990 APSA annual meeting.

Michael R. Fitzgerald, professor of political science and Senior Fellow, Energy, Environment and Resources Center, University of Tennessee, Knoxville, recently served as a member of the Citizen Ambassador Program of the Environmental Technology Delegation to the USSR. The purpose of the visit was to exchange information with respect to environmental technology with officials and scholars in the Soviet Union, and to discuss joint research efforts between the USSR and the University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

John Garcia, University of Arizona, is one of 10 educators selected by Educational Testing Service to help create a new assessment system for licensing beginning teachers. Garcia will serve on the social studies test development committee.

Colin Campbell, S.J.

Betty Glad, University of South Carolina, is representing the American Political Science Association on the Advisory Committee on Historical Diplomatic Documentation. The committee advises the historian of the State Department on the documents that should be included in U.S. Foreign Relations.

Margaret Hermann, Ohio State University, is a member of the Advisory Committee on Historical Diplomatic Documentation.

Henry H. Higuera, St. John's College in Annapolis, has been nominated by President Bush to serve on the National Council on the Humanities for a term to end January 1996, pending Senate confirmation.

Vernon E. Jordan, Jr., senior partner in the Washington, D.C. law firm of Akin, Gump, Strauss, Hauer & Feld, has been elected as a member of the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies.

Ian Shapiro has been appointed Editor of NOMOS. He will succeed John Chapman who will retire following the publication of NOMOS XXXV: Democratic Community.

David M. Welborn, professor of political science, University of Tennessee, Knoxville, has been named to direct an oral history project covering the political career of Senator Howard Baker, Jr., focusing on his service as Republican leader in the U.S. Senate from 1977 to 1985, and on his service as White House chief of staff from 1987 to 1989. The oral history is intended to complement Senator Baker's papers, which he recently donated to the University of Tennessee.

James W. White, professor, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, has been appointed to a three-year term as chair of the Joint Committee on Japanese Studies of the Social Science Research Council and the American Council of Learned Societies.

Administrative Appointments

James Reardon Anderson, director, Committee for Scholarly Communication with the Peoples' Republic of China, National Academy of Sciences.

R. Douglas Arnold, chair, department of politics, Princeton University.

Opoku Agyeman, chair, department of political science, Montclair State College.

Dan Caldwell, chair, department of political science, Pepperdine University.

Colin Campbell, S.J., university professor of the Isabelle and Henry Martin Chair of Philosophy and Politics, Georgetown University, was appointed as director of the Graduate Public Policy Program at Georgetown in July 1990. Campbell is co-editor of Governance, an international journal of policy and politics.

William J. Cibes, professor of government, Connecticut College, has been appointed by governor-elect Lowell Weicker as Secretary of the Office of Policy and Management for the State of Connecticut.

David Denoon, director of graduate studies, department of politics, New York University.

Robert E. England, head, department of political science, Oklahoma State University.

Cecil L. Eubanks, professor of political science at Louisiana State University, was recently appointed chair of the department. Eubanks is also co-editor for the Journal of Politics.

Ron Faucheux, former Louisiana State representative and commerce secretary, will head the newly created Government Leadership Institute at the University of New Orleans.

Richard S. Randall, chair, department of politics, New York University.

Steffen W. Schmidt has been appointed director of research for a new graduate program in municipal government at Universidad Externado de Colombia, Bogota. He will coordinate this work concurrently with his position at Iowa State University.

Norman Uphoff, professor of government and chair of the Rural Development Committee at Cornell University, has been named as director of the Cornell International Institute for Food, Agriculture and Development, a new institute to promote sustainable agricultural and rural development in developing countries.

Geoffrey R. Weller, first president of the University of Northern British Columbia; formerly Lakehead University.

New Appointments

William Arp, III, assistant professor of political science, Louisiana State University.

Laurie J. Bassi, associate professor of public policy and economics, Graduate Public Policy Program, Georgetown University, effective July 1990.

William Berry, professor of political science, Florida State University; formerly of the University of Kentucky.

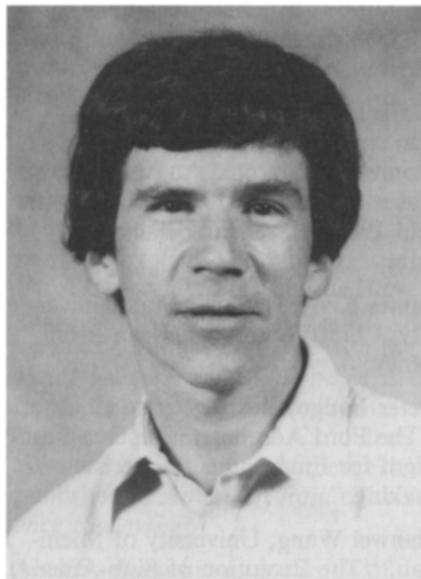

Keith A. Boeckelman, assistant professor of political science, Louisiana State University.

Patrick L. Clawson, an international economist, has been named editor of Orbis, the quarterly journal of world affairs published by the Foreign Policy Research Institute.

Lisa Disch, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota; formerly Mellon Scholar at the University of Chicago.

Mark Lilla, assistant professor, department of politics, New York University.

Ralph M. Goldman, professor emeritus, San Francisco State University, now adjunct professor, School of

William T. Gormley

International Service, The American University, Washington, D.C.

William T. Gormley, professor of public policy and government, Graduate Public Policy Program, Georgetown University. His recent book, Taming the Bureaucracy: Muscles, Prayers and Other Strategies, received the 1990 Louis Brownlow Book Award from the National Academy of Public Administration. Formerly, University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Stacia L. Haynie, assistant professor of political science, Louisiana State University.

Kevin McGuire, assistant professor, department of political science, university of Minnesota.

Lee Metcalf, assistant professor of political science, Florida State University; formerly of Stanford University.

Jeannette Money, assistant professor of political science, Louisiana State University.

Lilliard Richardson, assistant professor of political science, University of Tennessee, Knoxville; formerly of Duke University.

Steven R. Schlesinger, adjunct professor of government, School of Public Affairs, The American University.

Barbara M. Yarnold, assistant professor, department of public administration, Florida International University; formerly of Saginaw Valley State University.

Peter R. Zwick, professor of political science, California State University San Marcos; formerly Louisiana State University.

Promotions

Evelyn Davidheiser, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Steven Smith, professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Michael C. Stratford, associate professor, department of political science, Central Michigan University.

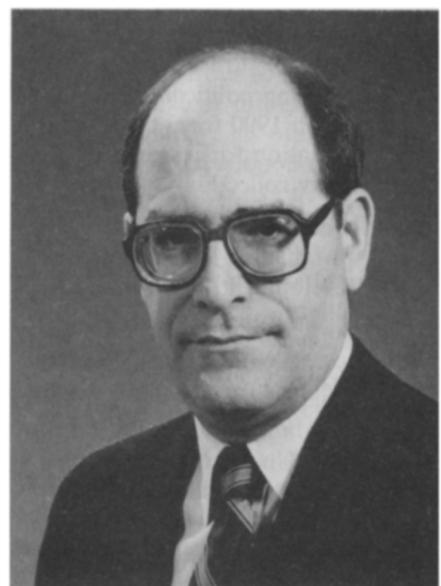

David B. Yoffie, professor, Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard University.

Retirement

Kenneth Kofmehl, professor of American politics emeritus, Purdue University, effective May 1990.

Visiting and Temporary Appointment

Robert Beck, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota, 1990-91.

Peter R. Zwick