

An exposé and a revelation of Chile today.

The Reagan Administration's decision to begin "covert" activities in Central America once again evokes the specter of Chile's tragedy and the overthrow of the Allende government.

In Samuel Chavkin's vivid new book, THE MURDER OF CHILE, some 60 survivors of the coup give eyewitness accounts of

- how Nixon-directed "covert" operations led to the junta's seizure of power
- how terror and repression took hold and 30,000 Chileans perished in concentration camps

Here are the survivors, telling their personal experiences: Hortensia Allende, former foreign minister Clodomiro Almeyda, Isabel Letelier, Sweden's Ambassador Edelstam, Joan Jara, as well as the shantytown dwellers and the unforgettable women resisters.

Here is a report on the resistance today, the actions being taken now against the Pinochet regime—the massive labor strikes, sabotage, and demonstrations protesting the torture and still more "disappearances" of anti-junta suspects.

Human Rights and United States Policy toward Latin America

Lars Schoultz

"[A] welcome book that develops the complex interrelationships among the institutions, participants, and processes through which the U.S. government has formulated its increasingly important human rights position toward Latin America. Schoultz uses thorough documentation to describe the historic ignorance of the public and the policymaker toward Latin America, as well as the comparative influence of various interest groups." —Library Journal.
