

Award Recipients

American Academy of Arts and Sciences

Three political scientists, Russell Hardin of the University of Chicago, Harold Jacobson of the University of Michigan, and Kenneth Shepsle of Harvard University are among the ninety-six leading scholars, scientists, public figures, and artists elected in 1990 by the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

American Council of Learned Societies

CHINESE STUDIES

Shelley E. Rigger, graduate student, department of government, Harvard University, received a dissertation research fellow award of $10,000 for "The Kuomintang and the Democratic Progressive Party: Political Reform and Organized Opposition in the Republic of China."

TRAVEL GRANTS

The following political scientists received travel grant awards. Their names and affiliations are followed by the travel locations and project or paper titles.

William T. Bluhm, University of Rochester. Leuven, Belgium, Utilitarianism: Its Strengths and Weaknesses as the Ideology of Europe, September 3-8, 1990.

Kenneth L. Deutsch, SUNY, Geneseo. Kota Open University, Japan, International Conference on the Philosophy of the Social Sciences, January 2-5, 1990.

Jane Flax, Howard University. Colchester, England, Should Modernity Be "Redeemed"?, July 8-11, 1990.

Roger Hamburg, Indiana University, South Bend. Madrid, Spain, Glasnost, Perestroika, and the Soviet Military, July 6-7, 1990.

Darrell P. Hammer, Indiana University, Bloomington. Leuven, Belgium, The "Russian Idea" as Political Philosophy, September 3-8, 1990.

Hasan Javadi, University of California, Berkeley. Ali Akbar Saber (Taherzadeh) and 'Mulla Nasreddin,' Baku, Azerbaijan, Soviet.

Christopher Kelly, University of Maryland, Baltimore County. Leuven, Belgium, Rousseau on the Foundation of National Cultures, September 3-8, 1990.

Walter J. Nicgorski, University of Notre Dame. Leuven, Belgium, Cicero on the Function and Limits of Roman Nationalism, September 3-8, 1990.

Susan M. Sterett, SUNY, Binghamton. London, England, Creating Unnecessary Loopholes: The Problems of Race Relations Law in England and Wales.

D. Paul Thomas, University of California, Berkeley. Leuven,

Belgium, The Revolutionary Festival and Rousseau's Quest for Transparency, September 3-8, 1990.

Center for Latin American Studies

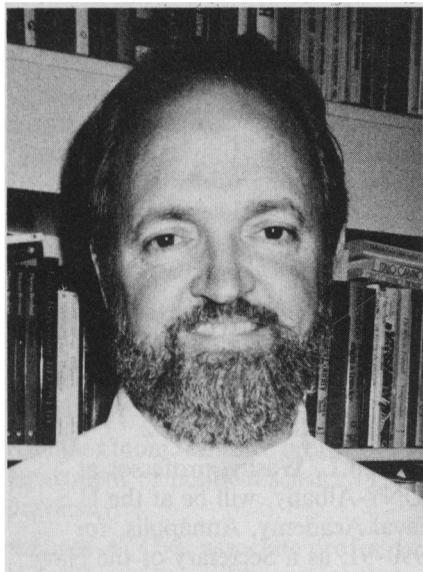

The Center for Latin American Studies of the University of Pittsburgh provides funding of up to $25,000 each to support research projects on current issues in Latin American politics, economics, foreign policy, sociology, and development. The seven research projects awarded grants for 1990 include four by political scientists. Following are their names, affiliation, and subject of research.

Roderic A. Camp, professor of political science, Central University of Iowa; "Clerics, Religion and Political Modernization in Mexico."

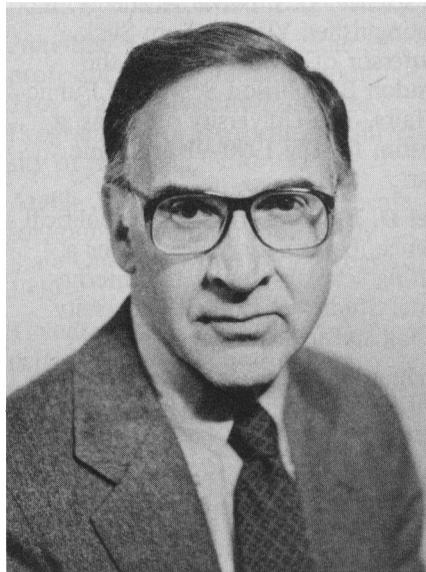

Marcelo Cavarozzi, professor of political science, University of Buenos Aires, Argentina; "The Consolidation of Democracy and Civil-Military Relations in Argentina."

Jonathan Fox, assistant professor of political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; "Accountability and Citizen Participation in Mexico's Political Transition."

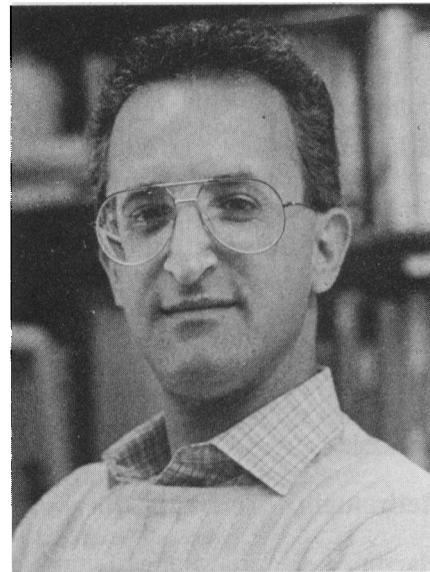

Margaret E. Keck, assistant professor of political science, Yale University; "Environmental Politics in Brazil."

Russell Hardin

Harold Jacobson

Kenneth R. Shepsle

Council for European Studies

The Council for European Studies' Committee on Pre-Dissertation Fellowships awarded 15 fellowships in the social sciences for 1990. Each fellowship carries a stipend of $3,000. Following are the fellows in political science with their affiliation and dissertation topics.

Dan Blanch, international studies, University of Denver, "State Building and Societal Cleavages in Spain."

Theodore Scarborough, government, Harvard, "From the Treaty of Rome to the Single European Act: France, West Germany, Great Britain, and the Development of the European Economic Community."

Steven Vogel, political science, U.C. Berkeley, "The Politics of Deregulation in Britain, France and Japan: The Case of Telecommunications."

Sarah Wayland, Government and Politics, University of Maryland, "Unconventional Forms of Political Participation: Methods and Outcomes of Third World Immigrant Action in France."

Hoover Institution

Twelve postdoctoral National and Peace Fellowships have been awarded by the Hoover Institution, Stanford University, for the 1990-91 academic year. The fellowships provide scholars with an opportunity to spend a year at the Hoover Institution to conduct independent work on research projects and public policy issues.

The following political scientists, their topics, and academic backgrounds are National Fellows.

Scott P. Mainwaring, "Brazilian Party Development in Comparative Perspective"; associate professor, Kellogg Institute for International Studies, University of Notre Dame; Ph.D., political science, Stanford University.

James A. McAdams, "A Grand Illusion: Inter-German Relations and the Fall of the German Democratic Republic"; assistant professor, department of politics, Princeton University; Ph.D., political science, UC-Berkeley.

Jean C. Oi, "Chinese Rural Government in the Era of Reform, Bureaucratic Entrepreneurship in Local Economies"; associate professor, Fairbank Center, Harvard University; Ph.D., political science, University of Michigan.

Raymond C. Taras, "Elite Conflict in a Communist Party: The Self-Destruction of the PUWP"; associate professor, department of political science, Tulane University; Ph.D., political science, University of Warsaw.

National Science Foundation Graduate Fellowships

Outstanding college and university students were offered 850 fellowships this year for graduate study in the natural and social sciences, mathematics, and engineering. Following are the name of the fellows who plan to study political science, with their baccalaureate institutions and proposed graduate institution.

Matthew Darin Berger, Yale University; Harvard University.

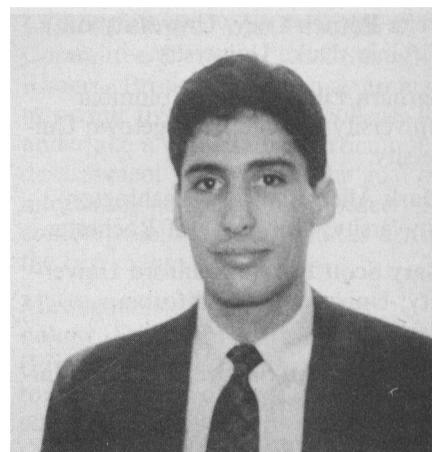

Gardner Bovingdon, Princeton University; Harvard University.

Jonathan Michael Crystal, Harvard University; Harvard University.

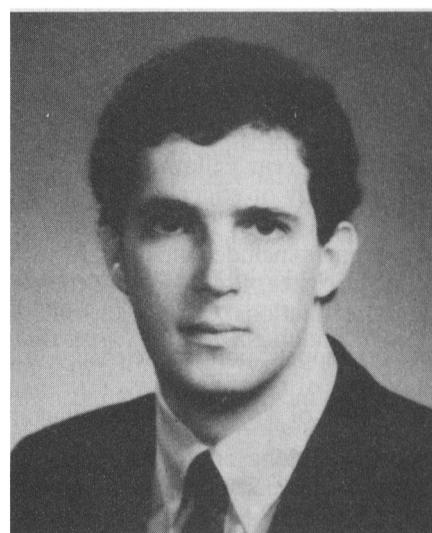

Leslyn Michelle Hall, Brown University; University of Michigan.

Bruce Kirkwood Harris, University of Texas, Austin; Princeton University.

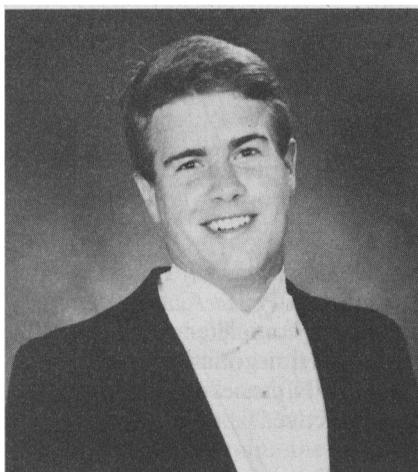

Richard Brian Katskee, University of Michigan; Harvard University.

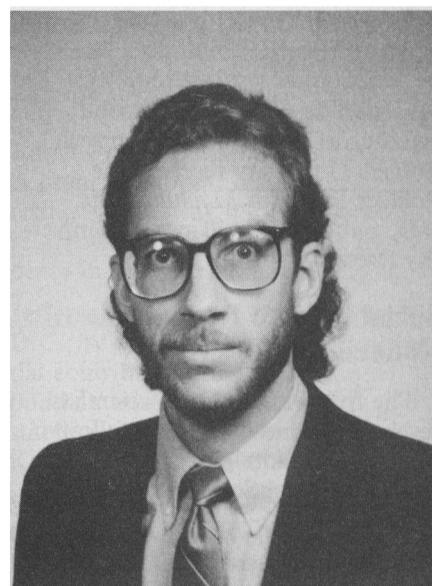

Richard B. Katskee

Richard Snyder

Bruce K. Harris

Steven R. Van Winkle

People in Political Science

Dean Patrick Lacy, University of Virginia; Duke University.

Barbara Ellen Petzen, Columbia University College; Georgetown University.

Mark Allen Ramsey, Washington University; University of Rochester.

Gary Scott Rosen, Stanford University; University of California, Berkeley.

Richard Owen Snyder, Harvard University; Harvard University.

Stephen R. Van Winkle, University of Oklahoma; Harvard University.

Scott Alan Wilson, University of Minnesota; Stanford University.

Newcombe Dissertation Year Fellowships

The Charlotte W. Newcombe Dissertation Year Fellowships support the study of ethical or religious values in all fields. The 1990 fellowship winners include students of political science. Following are their names, affiliations, and topics.

Ingrid Creppell, political science, University of Chicago. The Emergence of Toleration as a Value.

Daniel J. Goldhagen, government, Harvard University. The Political, Social, and Cultural Sources of Nazi Genocide.

Susan S. Monoson, politics, Princeton University. Athens, Democracy and Plato.

Pulitzer Prize

Sebastian de Grazia, professor emeritus of political philosophy at Rutgers University received the Pulitzer Prize for Machiavelli in Hell, published by Princeton University Press.

Social Science Research Council

The following political scientists received advanced research fellowships in U.S. foreign policy studies from the Social Science Research Council.

Richard C. Eichenberg, Tufts University. In his project, "Helmut and Jimmy: Leadership, Foreign Policy, and Cooperation Among States," Eichenberg investigates whether leadership preferences have an impact on the prospects for cooperation and discord among states.

Patrick O'Heffernan, Georgia Institute of Technology. In "Mass Media in Foreign Policy: Superpower Marketing Communication in Shaping Post-Cold War Europe," Heffernan studies media relations and image marketing as foreign policy tools of the U.S. and the Soviet Union in post-Cold War Europe.

United States Institute of Peace

The following is a list of 1990-91 fellows and scholars in politics selected by the Jennings Randolph Program of the U.S. Institute of Peace and a description of grants awarded during the first quarter of 1990.

JENNINGS RANDOLPH PROGRAM FOR INTERNATIONAL PEACE

Distinguished Fellows are eminent scholars and practitioners with careers marked by extraordinary achievement.

Alexander George, professor of international relations, Stanford University. George will conduct research and write about the concept of "coercive diplomacy" as a strategy for preventing war and the use of case studies in research and policy-making.

Mancur Olson, professor of economics, University of Maryland. Olson will apply economic tools of thought, developed earlier in his books, The Logic of Collective Action and The Rise and Decline of Nations, to write about the causes of international conflict and cooperation.

Indar Rikhye, founder and president, International Peace Academy. Rikhye will complete a book about international negotiations and ways to make UN peacekeeping operations more effective.

Peace Fellows are persons whose careers demonstrate substantial accomplishments and promise for future leadership.

Mark Hoffman, lecturer in international relations, London School of Economics, and Director, Centre for the Analysis of Conflict, University of Kent. Hoffman will write about how third party mediation can help resolve Third World conflicts.

Cynthia McClintock, professor of political science at George Washington University. McClintock will conduct field research and write a book about Peru and other countries in the region that are confronting violent revolutionary movements while trying to implement democratic political systems.

Vernon Mendis, former Sri Lankan ambassador to France, Canada, United Kingdom, and the UN and former regional director of UNESCO to the Arab States. Mendis will investigate how the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (SAARC) can assist with conflict management in the region.

John Zhao, research fellow, international relations program, East-West Center, Honolulu. Zhao will write a book about China's foreign policy and its implications for the future.

Peace Scholars are outstanding students in American university doctoral programs who are undertaking dissertation research that advances the state of knowledge about international peace and conflict management.

Mark Genest, department of political science, Georgetown University, is exploring the influence of the media on arms control negotiations.

Sohail Hashmi, department of political science, Harvard University, is studying the implications of classical and contemporary Islamic ethical teachings for international relations.

Itshak Lederman, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, is studying the objectives and operations of arms verification agreements in general, and of a conventional agreement in Europe in particular.

Jeffrey Legro, department of political science, UCLA, is examining the use of restraint and escalation in war, focusing on three types of weapons—submarines, strategic bombing, and chemical weapons.

Laura Reed, department of political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is exploring American policy alternatives for Germany in the period immediately following World War II.

GRANT AWARDS

Alliance for Education on Global and International Studies, New York, New York (Ronald Herring, Project Director): A grant to support development of guidelines to strengthen pre-collegiate international education programs. Project includes the preparation of instructional materials, establishment of curriculum resource centers, and teacher education. $30,000.

American Enterprise Institute, Washington, D.C. (Constantine Menges, Project Director): A grant to support a study of the political settlements and negotiations in contemporary regional conflicts in Afghanistan, Cambodia, Angola, Mozambique, and Nicaragua. $15,000.

American Institute for Contemporary German Studies, Washington, D.C. (Robbin Laird, Project Director): A grant to support a study assessing options for the evolution of the European security structure by analyzing the interaction of Soviet and West German policies. $30,000.

Cambridge Forum, Cambridge, Massachusetts (Herbert Vetter, Project Director): A grant to produce a broadcast series of ten programs that will explore the potential for resolving major conflicts throughout the world. $15,000.

Columbia University, New York, New York (Kent McKeever, Project Director): A grant to convert the remaining paper card catalogue records of the International Law Collection of the Columbia University Law School Library into computer-usable electronic records that will be added to two national library computer networks. $20,000.

George Mason University, Center for Conflict Analysis and Resolution,

Fairfax, Virginia (James Laue, Project Director): A grant to support a conference on the termination of deep-rooted and protracted conflict in Northern Ireland. $7,000.

Hebrew University, Jerusalem, Israel (Baruch Kimmerling, Project Director): A grant to support a study of the impact of the 1982 war in Lebanon on Israeli reserve soldiers' and protest leaders' perceptions of war as a means to the attainment of political goals. $20,000.

Henry Stimson Center, Washington, D.C. (Alan Platt, Project Director): A grant to support a study of arms control in the Middle East. The project will culminate in an edited volume. $20,000.

Human Relations Area Files, New Haven, Connecticut (Melvin Ember, Carol R. Ember and Bruce M. Russett, Project Directors): A grant to support research testing the general hypothesis that autonomous political units with more political participation show less warfare with one another than with less participatory political units, even when appropriate controls are introduced into the analysis. $20,000.

International Peace Academy, New York, New York (Indarjit Rikhye, Project Director): A grant to develop a comprehensive collection of peace-keeping resources accessible to researchers and practitioners. The project will initially produce an online catalogue of the Peace Academy's current collection of some 3,500 volumes and documents. $25,000.

Iowa Peace Institute, Grinnell, Iowa (John McDonald and Louise Diamond, Project Directors): A grant to undertake a systems analysis of the nine areas, or tracks, of "diplomacy" that attempt to foster international peacemaking. $25,000.

Johns Hopkins University, School of Advanced and International Studies, Washington, D.C. (Riordan Roett and Wayne Smith, Project Directors): A grant to support a conference of Argentine and British experts on the Falklands/Malvinas dispute who will examine the obstacles to the resolution of the dispute. $30,000.

Luther College, Nobel Peace Prize Committee, Decorah, Iowa (James Rhodes, Project Director): A grant to permit five midwestern colleges to undertake a cooperative curriculum development project with the goal of integrating perspectives on peace/conflict resolution into courses across the curriculum. $35,000.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Massachusetts (Lincoln Bloomfield, Project Director): A grant to further develop an educational software program, the Computer-Aided System for Analysis of Local Conflicts (CASCON), designed to improve understanding of repetitious patterns in regional conflicts. $40,000.

Michael Newbrough, Palomar College, San Marcos, California: A grant to support a study of approaches to teaching undergraduate peace and international relations courses in Britain, France, Hungary, and the USSR. $6,000.

Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, Illinois (Thomas Wiegele, Project Director): A grant to support a study of international events associated with the 1987-1989 Libyan chemical weapons factory episode and to develop a set of policy options to combat threats posed by chemical weapons. $15,000.

Pacific Street Film Projects, Inc., Brooklyn, New York (Steven Fischler, Project Director): A grant to support completion of a documentary film entitled "Blue Helmets" examining the role of the UN in promoting international peace and conflict resolution. $15,000.

Karen Puschel, Washington, D.C.: A grant to support a study of changes underway in Soviet-Israeli relations and the implications for peace in the Middle East. $35,000.

Jefferson Seabright, Washington, D.C.: A grant to examine the potential contribution of confidence-building measures to increased stability and reduced tensions on the Korean peninsula. $10,500.

Stanford University, Palo Alto, California (Norman Naimark and Hans Weiller, Project Directors): A grant to support the development and dissemination of five curriculum units on the themes of conflict, conflict reduction, and conflict resolution in Western Europe, the USSR, and Eastern Europe. $30,000.

People in Political Science

State Historical Society of Wisconsin: Madison, Wisconsin (James P. Danky, Project Director): A grant to survey, catalogue, and microfilm unprocessed collections relating to peace currently in the Society's library. $11,000.

Syracuse University, College of Law, Syracuse, New York (L.F.E. Goldie, Project Director): A grant to support the publication of papers resulting from a conference on the problems of neutrality and the use of force at sea. $10,000.

University of California, Los Angeles, Center for International and Strategic Affairs (Michael Intriligator, Project Director): A grant to establish a study commission on regional conflicts and diplomatic initiatives in Africa. $45,000.

University of Kent, Center for Analysis and Conflict, Canterbury, England (Mark Hoffman, Stephen Chan and Vivienne Jabri, Project Directors): A grant to examine different approaches to third-party mediation of Third World conflicts. $35,000.

University of Missouri, Center for International Studies, St. Louis, Missouri (Joel Glassman, Project Director): A grant to explore issues of national security and peacemaking from local, national and international perspectives in order to create curricular programs to be used in St. Louis secondary schools. $25,000.

Woodrow Wilson Center

The Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars has announced the appointment of 39 fellows for the 1990-91 academic year. Following are the names of political scientists with the titles of their projects and their dates of residence.

Junnosuke Masumi, professor emeritus of political science, Tokyo Metropolitan University, Japan. East Asia and Japan. October 1990-August 1991.

Waller R. Newell, associate professor of political science, Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada. Ruling passion: studies in the meaning of tyranny and princely virtue. September 1990-May 1991.

Michael G. Schatzberg, associate professor of comparative politics and African studies, the Nitze School of Advanced International Studies, Johns Hopkins University. Contested terrain; political thought, language, and legitimacy in Africa. July 1990-June 1991.

Annette Seegers, senior lecturer in political studies, University of Cape Town, South Africa. The military in the making of modern South Africa. October 1990-September 1991.

Other Awards and Honors

Philip Abbott, department of political science, Wayne State University, has received a President's Award for Excellence in Teaching, 1990.

Carl Q. Christol, Professor Emeritus of International Law and Political Science at the University of Southern California, received a Distinguished Emeritus Award from the University at the Annual Academic Honors Convocation on March 13, 1990.

Joshua Cohen, professor of philosophy and political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was awarded the Levitan Prize in the Humanities for his project entitled The Moral Arc of the Universe: Justice and the Demise of Slavery.

Susan Fino, department of political science, Wayne State University, was awarded the Probus Club Award for 1990 in Social Sciences for Academic Achievement by Junior Faculty.

Stephen E. Frantzich, political science department, U.S. Naval Academy, was awarded the 1990 Naval Academy Alumni Association Teaching Excellence Award as the most outstanding civilian instructor at the academy.

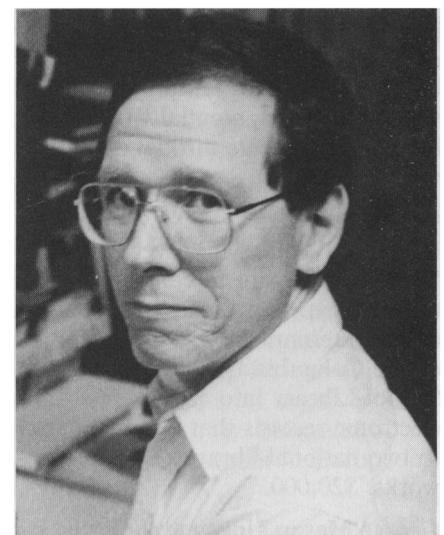

Richard L. Hall, University of Michigan-Ann Arbor, and Frank Wayman, University of Michigan-Dearborn, received the Pi Sigma Alpha Award for the best paper presented at the 1989 Midwest Political Science Association Annual Meetings, for "Buying Time: Rational PACs and the Mobilization of Bias in Congressional Committees."

Stephen Frantzich

Richard L. Hall

Frank W. Wayman

Ronald Inglehart, department of political science, University of Michigan, has received the Worcester Prize for the most outstanding article in the International Journal of Public Opinion Research for "The Rise of Postmaterialistic Values and Changing Religious Orientations, Gender Roles and Sexual Norms," (co-authored with David Appel).

Michael S. Lewis-Beck, political science, University of Iowa, received the Quincy Wright Award from the International Studies Association for his book Economics and Elections: The Major Western Democracies.

James M. Lindsay, political science, University of Iowa, has been awarded a Pew Faculty Fellowship in International Affairs.

Colette G. Mazzucelli, Georgetown University, is a 1990-91 Fulbright Fellow to Paris, France, where she will begin doctoral research on the policies of the French Socialists and the German Social Democrats towards Eastern Europe in the 1980s. Mazzucelli is also the recipient of a Jean Monnet Dissertation Fellowship for German language studies and dissertation research during the summers 1990 and 1991.

Emile A. Nakhleh, chair of department of government and international studies, Mount Saint Mary's, has been selected as the college's first holder of the John L. Morrison Professorship in International Studies. The professorship was endowed for the purpose of honoring a dedicated teacher and scholar.

Eric J. Novotny, vice president, international marketing and business development, COMSAT systems division, was selected to receive the 1990 University Faculty Award for Outstanding Teaching (Adjunct) at The American University.

Lucian W. Pye, Ford International professor of political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was awarded the institute's Graduate Student Council Teaching Award. This award is given each year to one professor in each department for excellence in teaching, particularly with respect to teaching and interaction with graduate students.

Alfredo Rehren, University of Chile, has been awarded a 1990-91 research fellowship by the John Carter Brown Library at Brown University for "Executive Leadership and the Redemocratization of Argentina, Chile and Uruguay."

Wayne G. Reilly, professor of political science, Hollins College, has been selected as the first recipient of the Marion Salinger Award by The Southeast Council for Canadian Studies in recognition of outstanding and important contributions to Canadian Studies.

Charles F. Sabel, professor of political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was awarded the Ford International Professor chair.

Kim Scheppele, department of political science, University of Michigan, has received the Class of 1923 Teaching Award for her excellence in undergraduate teaching. She also received the university's Faculty Recognition Award for 1989-90. Scheppele received "Special Recognition" in the Distinguished Scholarship Competition of the American Sociological Association for her book Legal Secrets. She was also granted tenure effective fall 1990.

John N. Short, University of Arkansas at Monticello, was awarded the campus Alpha Chi honor society

Wayne Reilly

1990 Teacher of the Year award for overall excellence and achievement in teaching, professional activities, and contributions to the campus.

Kurt Steiner, Professor Emeritus of Political Science, Stanford University, was awarded an honorary Doctorate of the Social and Economic Sciences by the Academic Senate of the University of Vienna for his contribution to the field of comparative politics.

Charles Stewart III, associate professor of political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been selected to be the next holder of the Cecil and Ida Green Career Development Professorship for a two-year term.

Paul P. Van Riper, professor emeritus of political science, Texas A&M University, is the recipient of the 1989-90 Dwight Waldo Award of the American Society of Public Administration for outstanding contributions to the literature and leadership of public administration through an extended career.

Harold Wolman, department of political science, Wayne State University, has received a Charles Gershenson Distinguished Faculty Fellowship for 1990-1992.

In Memorium

Marver and Sheva Bernstein

Editor's Note: Marver H. Bernstein and his wife Sheva perished in a fire at the Heliopolis Sheraton Hotel, near Cairo, Egypt, on March 2, 1990. The Bernsteins were preparing to join a Smithsonian group tour of the Red Sea, having just completed a 10-day stay in Israel where they maintained an apartment.

Born in 1919 in Mankato, Minnesota, Marver Bernstein graduated Phi Beta Kappa from the University of Wisconsin, and earned a Ph.D. from Princeton University in 1948. During World War II, he served in the U.S. Bureau of the Budget. After the war, he taught at Princeton University and became the founding dean of its Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs, 1964-69. Bernstein was president of