

ceeding Amry Vandenbosch who has become director of the Patterson School of Diplomacy and International Commerce, established by the University of Kentucky to open in September, 1959.

Tang Tsou, research associate in the center for the study of American foreign and military policy at the University of Chicago, has been appointed as assistant professor in the department of political science at the University of Chicago.

Toshio G. Tsukahira of the Department of State has been appointed professorial lecturer in the school of government and public administration at The American University.

Donald Urquidi has been appointed a member of the department of political science at Michigan State.

S. Walter Washington, acting professor in the department of foreign affairs of the University of Virginia has joined the Henry Clay Foundation in New York. For the next year and a half he will continue his research on Latin American problems which will involve several trips to Latin America.

David Welborn, formerly of The University of Texas, has accepted a position as instructor in government at Indiana University.

Alan F. Westin, formerly assistant professor of Government at Cornell University, has been appointed associate professor of public law and government at Columbia University. During the academic year 1959-60 he will be on leave under grants from the Rockefeller Foundation and the Meyer Research Institute of Law, to complete a biography of the first Justice John Marshall Harlan.

Lewis J. Williams, formerly with the Department of Defense, has been appointed a Research Associate with the Ohio State Research Foundation. Mr. Williams is located at the Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Air Materiel Command, Dayton, Ohio. The Foundation, in cooperation with the Air University, is developing the new School of Logistics.

James Q. Wilson, who recently completed his Ph.D. degree at the University of Chicago, has been appointed an instructor in the department of political science at the University of Chicago.

Robert W. Wilson has been appointed instructor in the school of government and public administration at The American University to serve as academic director for Unit I of the Washington Semester Program.

Sheldon S. Wolin has been promoted to the rank of associate professor at the University of California, Berkeley.

Ronald Yalem, formerly of the University of Missouri, has accepted an appointment as associate professor of government at the College of William and Mary in Norfolk.

IN MEMORIAM

Donald Harvard Morrison died suddenly on March 17, 1959, peacefully in his sleep while he was a visitor at the home of his close friend and old teacher, John F. Sly, in Princeton, New Jersey. Although he had suffered a series of severe illnesses dating back to childhood days, he had been in good health in recent years and in his position as Provost of Dartmouth College he was an indefatigable worker.

He was born in Morgantown, West Virginia, on October 10, 1914, graduated from West Virginia University in 1936, and received his Ph.D. from Princeton University in 1940. He joined the Department of Government at Dartmouth College in 1945 after brief periods of service as a member of the faculty of Louisiana State University and as an administrative analyst in the U. S. Bureau of the Budget. Two years later, at the extraordinarily early age of 32, he was named Dean of the Faculty at Dartmouth. In 1955 he was appointed to the newly-created post of Provost.

Donald Morrison always took great pride in being a political scientist. He was co-author of a Budget Bureau publication, The United States at War, and also of a widely used text on American Government. From time to time he contributed articles and book reviews to political science journals. In the end, however, his great contribution to higher education was made as an administrator. His fellow political scientists may justly applaud this contribution. Most college professors believe that the academic profession should be a very important source of appointees to administrative posts in higher education, even though able men are thereby lost to teaching and research. Donald Morrison would undoubtedly have been an outstanding teacher and scholar; he chose instead to become an administrator. His record as Dean and Provost at Dartmouth College more than justifies his choice. The quality of that record is suggested by the following passage from a memorial resolution adopted by the faculty of Dartmouth College:

"Donald Morrison dedicated himself to the task of making the educational program of Dartmouth uncompromisingly first-rate. Every effort to raise the intellectual sights of the College could depend on his energetic and unremitting support. His vision and practical idealism made itself felt in almost every aspect of our work. His abiding concern was always with the educational experience of our students. Because he believed that the quality of the faculty was crucial in determining the quality of the College, he was unsparing in his efforts to encourage imaginative and ambitious faculty recruitment and correspondingly impatient with easy-going toleration of the second-rate. In the quality of men he attracted to Dartmouth, his influence on Dartmouth men will continue for decades."

ROBERT K. CARR