

Arabic Thought in the Liberal Age 1798-1939

ALBERT HOURANI

'... not only is the book itself enjoyable and enlightening, but it has also a high claim to importance as throwing light upon the concepts of current Arab politics and society, of their nationalism with its claims, frustrations and divisions, and of the hopes and fears of Arab statesmen as actors on the world stage.'—S. H. Longrigg in INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS 15s (Royal Institute of International Affairs) Oxford Paperbacks

East and West of Suez

THE SUEZ CANAL IN HISTORY 1854-1956

D. A. FARNIE

This book explains the role of the Suez Canal during the century when European economic expansion in Asia was at its height. In describing the Canal's function in the relations of East and West, it relates the Canal to the economic development of Asia and the emergence of the East-West trade. The book concludes with an account and assessment of the crisis of 1956. 3 maps £8 8s

The Persian Land Reform

1962-1966

ANN K. S. LAMBTON

'... to the specialist in Persian studies, her scholarly exposition of the intricate legislation will prove of permanent value. To the social scientist, confronted with a policy the results of which defy ordinary methods of evaluation, the interest lies in the direct contact with the peasants, not as questionnaire fodder but as people, whom she thanks in her preface for their help, hospitality and friendship over many years.'—THE ECONOMIST. 1 map 84s

The Russian Presence in Palestine and Syria 1843-1914

CHURCH AND POLITICS IN THE NEAR EAST
DEREK HOPWOOD

Dr Hopwood examines a hitherto neglected aspect of the history of the Ottoman Empire. The course of Russia's policy in the area is studied from the arrival in Jerusalem of the founder of the first Russian Mission until the collapse of Russian hopes with the outbreak of the First World War. 50s

The Society of the Muslim Brothers

'This book adds much to the four previous short studies of the Brotherhood. The author was an eye-witness of many of the key events he records and he has made good use of contemporary Arabic documents—some of which are no longer available. He casts some fascinating new light on the relationship between the Brotherhood and the Free Officers who made the 1952 Revolution.'—THE LISTENER 63s (Middle Eastern Monographs 9)

PARTNERSHIP AND PROFIT IN MEDIEVAL ISLAM

At a time when medieval Western Europe was barely emerging from a stage of barter economy, the trade of the Islamic East was flourishing, its techniques sophisticated and advanced, its commodities varied and numerous, and its merchants skilled and adventurous. Professor Udovitch explores some of the important qualitative aspects of medieval Near Eastern economic life from the point of view of both legal and economic history. Concentrating on partnership and commenda, he demonstrates that these two techniques were versatile legal-commercial instruments capable of fulfilling a variety of functions in the economic life of the Muslim world in the Middle Ages.

MIDDLE EAST OIL

A Study in Political and Economic Controversy

By GEORGE W. STOCKING

The story of Middle East oil is presented in this first really thorough treatment of the subject. The author has necessarily interwoven his economic study with the politics and history of the Middle East countries—oil-rich and oil-poor—and discusses the international reverberations occasioned by the discovery and development of the world's largest known oil deposits. Invaluable both for an understanding of past, present, and future events in the Middle East and for insight into the actions of countries—East and West—vying for influence and oil in the area. Of interest to economist, historian, news analyst, oil-industry executive, and layman alike.

ROBERT A. FERNEA

SHAYKH AND EFFENDI: Changing Patterns of Authority Among the El Shabana of Southern Iraq

Mr Fernea studies the El Shabana, a settled Arab tribe of southern Iraq, and their relation to the effects of modern centralized government on irrigation and land-holding patterns. This book, an important contribution to the ethnography of the Arab world, admirably presents the problems involved in the modernization of a traditional society. Harvard Middle Eastern Studies, 14. $8.00

BEN HALPERN

THE IDEA OF THE JEWISH STATE

Second Edition

The first edition of this book, published in 1961, was written as a comprehensive and systematic study of the Zionist movement. Since its initial publication, "swift, drastic and altogether dramatic" changes have created a need for an amplified edition. Mr Halpern has expanded his text to cover the period from the 1956 Sinai war to 1967. Harvard Middle Eastern Studies, 3. $15.00

WILLIAM R. POLK

THE UNITED STATES AND THE ARAB WORLD

Revised Edition

The first edition of this book, published in 1965, was praised as a comprehensive and illuminating account of the Arab world and Arab-American relations. Because of the drastic changes in the Middle East, Polk has updated and enlarged his study with a new preface, three new chapters, and two additional maps. American Foreign Policy Library. $7.95

COLOPHONS OF ARMENIAN MANUSCRIPTS, 1301-1480

A Source for Middle Eastern History

Armenian colophons, the product of a unique tradition, are valuable primary historical sources. Mr Sanjian has translated and annotated a selection of colophons which provide specific data on such topics as the economy, living conditions, ruling dynasties, and even epidemics. Harvard Armenian Texts and Studies, 2. $10.00

The Emergence of the Middle East 1914–1924

‘Contributes valuably to public knowledge and understanding of the present Middle East conflict. . . Mr Sachar’s scholarly chronicle covers the period in which the shape of things to come was effectively decided. The moral of it is that so long as the globe is an arena of power politics, neither Jews nor Arabs can hope to be masters of their own destinies’ James Holburn, Glasgow Herald 80s
