East Asian Civilizations

A Dialogue in Five Stages

Wm. Theodore de Bary

"By all odds the best available introduction to the world of East Asian thought — a distillation of a lifetime's work by the reigning master in the field. De Bary writes in a simple and engaging style, modestly bringing forth the key points and illustrating them with telling quotations that come from a lifetime of selection and translation." —John K. Fairbank

China Watch

John King Fairbank

"Fairbank is always readable and for those whose eyes have not been glued to the China scene for the past 15 years (and who need to brush up on their history a bit . . .) China Watch contains much that is thoughtful and thought-provoking."

—Gayle Feldman,

Los Angeles Times

The Chinese Army after Mao

Ellis Joffe

"An excellent study [of] China's military modernization and the politics of civil-military relations . . . This book has no competitor in breadth and depth of focus, clarity of presentation, and relevance to contemporary understanding of the subject." —Allen S. Whiting, University of Arizona

NEW: Documents Released in 1987

Confidential U.S. State Department Central Files

CHINA

Internal and Foreign Affairs, 1955–1959

UPA is pleased to announce that it has supplemented its series, Confidential U.S. State Department Central Files: China, with the addition of over 60,000 pages of official U.S. diplomatic papers that were unavailable for research until December 1987. These records on China for the years 1955 through 1959 have just been released to scholars at the National Archives and have never been published in any format until now. UPA's editions of the State Department Central Files for these years are complete and unedited and reproduce all available files on both internal and foreign affairs.

No other research collection matches the U.S. State Department Central Files for their historical range, their in-depth analysis, and their exhaustive treatment of the political, military, economic, social, and foreign affairs of China. The Great Leap Forward, the collectivization of agriculture, the creation of the rural people's communes, Mao's call for free expression and the ensuing antirightist campaign, the Sino-Soviet schism, and hostilities with Formosa over the islands in the Taiwan Strait are but a few of the major topics covered extensively in these files. For the study of these eventful years in Chinese history, there is no better source than the Central Files of the U.S. State Department.

Manuscripts

The China Quarterly welcomes the submission of manuscripts from scholars, including research students, on all aspects of contemporary China and from all points of view, including those which deal with Taiwan and the Overseas Chinese. Articles on China prior to 1949 are also welcome, particularly, but not exclusively, when these relate directly to contemporary China or to the history of the Chinese Communist Party. Articles should be submitted, in triplicate, to the editorial office. They should be typed in double spacing, footnotes being placed at the end of the article; preferably conform to the styling of The China Quarterly; and normally not exceed 8–10,000 words in length. A style sheet is available upon request. Submission of a manuscript is taken to imply that it has not previously been published and that it is not currently being considered elsewhere.

The China Quarterly is published by the School of Oriental and African Studies, London University. The views expressed in articles are those of individual authors and do not necessarily represent the views of the School.

FOUNDATIONS AND LIMITS OF STATE POWER IN CHINA

Edited by STUART R. SCHRAM

Religious and ritual dimensions clearly set off the conception of the state in traditional China from that in the modern West. The authors of the essays in this book consider what precisely constituted the state in imperial times, and the transition from traditional conceptions to the ideas prevailing today.
