

Post-Communist Economies

EDITOR:

Roger Clarke, formerly Glasgow University, UK

Post-Communist Economies publishes key research and policy articles in the economic and political analysis of post-communist economies. The basic transformation of regimes in the past two decades through stabilisation, liberalisation and privatisation has been completed in virtually all of the former communist countries, but despite the dramatic changes that have taken place the post-communist economies still form a clearly identifiable group, distinguished by the impact of the years of communist rule, and this looks set to remain true for many more years. Post-communist economies still present distinctive problems which make them a particular focus of research.

There is need for further stabilisation, liberalisation and privatisation and there are fundamental problems of low efficiency, productivity and income to address. All still have some distance to go to match the long-established market economies and more attention needs to be devoted to the microeconomic aspects of the post-communists countries' efforts to catch up with the much richer countries of the European Union they seek to join.

NATIONALITIES PAPERS is the only journal in the world which deals exclusively with all nationalities of the former USSR, and also with national minorities in Eastern and Central European countries. The problems and importance of over 140 million people are treated with the disciplinary and methodological contexts of Post-Soviet and Europe-Asia studies. Nationalities Papers is an international and multidisciplinary journal with contributors and readers throughout North America, Western and Eastern Europe, the Far East, Japan and the People's Republic of China. Included in each general issue are in-depth analyses from the historical view, updates on latest developments, some original documents, and book reviews; some issues concentrate on a region or nationality as a special topic, which exclusive focus allows for more extensive and detailed information.
