Professor Maritain turns his attention to a subject which is widely discussed at the present time. He considers what is the nature of a philosophy of history and what are the possibilities of such a discipline. He asks why are historians so distrustful of it? What about the views of Hegel, Comte, Marx, Toynbee and others? He analyses and probes such problems as: what kind of stability, if any, is discernible in history? What kind of progress, what kind of development and evolution does history exhibit? On these and many other important, far-ranging questions he sheds new light and points out new areas of study. The chapters included in this book have not appeared previously in print.

The Complete Works of Montaigne

ESSAYS, TRAVEL JOURNAL, LETTERS

Newly translated by Donald M. Frame. "A great volume . . . This work has the merit of presenting not only all the 'Essays' in unexpurgated, clear English, but also of giving the modern reader Montaigne's 'Travel Journal' and the 39 existing letters he wrote to his family and friends."

—Paul Jordan Smith. $12.50

Fossils and Presences

ALBERT GUERARD

A distillation of the author's rich experience as student, scholar, and teacher. Essays on nationalism, liberty, and justice; and on such "presences" as Dante, Vigny, Mann.

$5.00

The Jacksonian Persuasion

MARVIN MEYERS

Politics and Belief. A brilliant re-examination of political, social, and economic attitudes in the age of Jackson. "One of those peak moments of insight which stand as consummations of historical understanding."

—Richard Hofstadter. $5.00

After Walden

THOREAU'S CHANGING VIEWS ON ECONOMIC MAN

LEO STOLLER

Sharply challenges the conventional view of Thoreau as a static thinker who never budged from the ideas underlying the Walden experiment, and also assesses his significance for today.
