
The Classical Journals Board wish to express their grateful thanks to the Trustees of the Derby Fund at Oxford, whose help has made possible the publication of the General Index to Vols. I-XXXII, which has recently been issued to subscribers.

DOCUMENTS ILLUSTRATING THE REIGNS OF
CLAUDIUS AND NERO

Collected by

M. P. CHARLESWORTH

3s. 6d. net

A collection of inscriptions and papyri, many discovered only in the last decade, not easily available to the ordinary student of the early Roman Empire. All those utterances of Claudius which can be regarded as authentic are included.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

AESCHYLUS:
THE CREATOR OF TRAGEDY

By GILBERT MURRAY

Pp. 254. 7s. 6d. net

THIS is a book of literary criticism, not of technical scholarship, much less of archaeology. It endeavours to show how Aeschylus started with a raw material of what Aristotle calls 'little myths and ridiculous language', and how, by inventive stagecraft, majestic diction, and deeply felt philosophic thought, he built up therefrom a style of drama which had never existed before and which has given its meaning to the word 'tragic', whether the word be applied to dramas, like Macbeth or Athalie, to poems like Paradise Lost, or novels like Les Misérables or War and Peace.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS