The Design of the Present

Essays on Time and Form in American Literature

By John F. Lynen

Mr Lynen synthesizes two theoretical concepts—the idea that the formal structure of a literary work is determined in part by its assumptions concerning time, and the belief that the main tradition of American literature is revealed in a distinctive species of forms stemming both from Puritan theology and the individualism characteristic of American thought in all periods. The Interpreted Design as a Structural Principle in American Prose

By David L. Minter

In tracing the development of an important prose genre in America, Mr Minter focuses on the juxtaposition of men whose planned actions are directed towards personal goals and men whose powers of mind and imagination enable them to understand the meaning of the inevitable failure of such designed activity. Among the writers discussed are Edwards, Franklin, Thoreau, Henry Adams, Hawthorne, James, Fitzgerald and Faulkner. Forthcoming May, 58s.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to the Editor, Journal of American Studies, Department of American Studies, The University, Manchester 13. Contributors need not be members of the British Association for American Studies.

Contributions should be clearly typed in double spacing, preferably on quarto paper. Wide left-hand margins should be provided. Diagrams and maps may be included by arrangement with the Editor.

The rule about double-spacing applies also to footnotes. These should be inserted for the following purposes only:

- (iii) to give evidence relied on by the contributor for any new or unusual conclusions.

General notes intended for the Editor and printer should be attached on a separate sheet. Contributors should keep one copy of the typescript for use in correcting proofs.

First proofs may be read and corrected by contributors provided that they can give the Editor an address through which they can be reached without delay and can guarantee to return the corrected proofs to the Editor, by airmail where appropriate, within ten days of receiving them. The master proof will always be sent direct to the Editor by the printer; contributors will receive duplicates.
