

A new edition of a unique and authoritative compendium on the history, dynastic genealogies and administrative development of the Provinces of Northern Nigeria:

GAZETTEERS OF THE NORTHERN PROVINCES OF NIGERIA

Edited, with a new introduction and prefatory notes, by
A. H. M. Kirk-Greene

At first, the Gazetteers were the standard background reference books of colonial administrators posted to their respective Provinces, but they subsequently acquired a reputation with the post-independence generation of Africanist scholars as valuable sources of local knowledge.

In his deeply-researched introduction to this first-ever composite collection of the Gazetteers, Mr Kirk-Greene traces the history of this genre of administrative literature in Nigeria, and discusses its role in field administration throughout the changes in provincial nomenclature over the past seventy years. In addition, he provides tables and checklists, specifically devised for the newcomer to the subject, of the structure of what used to be Northern Nigeria. Each volume includes a separate Prefatory Note and basic bibliography for the history of the area covered. For easy reference, the contents of the volumes have been arranged so as to group together the principal Hausa/Fulani emirates, the central kingdoms and the high-land chieftaincies.

To the original eleven volumes of 1920–21, the editor has added the Gazetteer of Plateau Province (1934) and two further volumes are in preparation: Ilorin Province (1929) and Sokoto Province (1938).

The Shehus of Kukawa

A History of the al-Kanemi Dynasty of Bornu

Louis Brenner

This book is the first attempt by a Western-trained scholar to reconstruct the nineteenth-century history of Bornu from both European and Arabic written sources as well as contemporary oral data. It is a political history which focuses on the internal dynamics of the Bornu ruling classes. 3 plates 2 text figures £3.75

Sources of Yoruba History

Saburi O. Biobaku

An historian of the Yoruba, still largely a non-literate society, cannot ignore oral traditions in all their forms – Ifa oracular dicta, ‘oriki’ or praise poems, proverbs and topical songs, and ceremonies re-enacting historical events. He has available only scanty written sources, and requires the disciplines of archaeology, ethnography, linguistics, and sociology, to elucidate this material. 8 plates 5 text figures £3.50

Priests and Politicians

Protestant and Catholic Missions in Orthodox Ethiopia
1830–1868

Donald Crummey

This contribution to the growing literature on Christian missions in Africa is based upon an extensive use of English, French, Swiss, and Italian archives. The main emphasis is on political inter-action: the central role of missionaries in the genesis of modern Afro-European relations; and the apparent motives of Ethiopian leaders in dealing with representatives of an alien society. 5 plates 3 maps £4

The External Trade of the Loango Coast 1576–1870

The Effects of Changing Commercial Relations on the Vili Kingdom of Loango

Phyllis M. Martin

This study traces the development of trade in the Loango Coast area, starting with the pre-slave era, following the story through the slave-trade period, and looking briefly at the legitimate trade that had developed by the mid-nineteenth century. 4 maps £4.50

Indirect Rule and the Search for Justice

Essays in East African Legal History

H. F. Morris and James S. Read

These essays examine aspects of the search for justice which was a recurrent theme during the colonial period. They trace the development of official policies in East Africa, and the application of the doctrine of indirect rule during its heyday. Tables £5.50

The Emin Pasha Relief Expedition 1886–1890

Iain R. Smith

H. M. Stanley's last great African expedition, to 'relieve' the Governor of the equatorial province of the Sudan at the time of the Mahdist revolt, is probably the best documented expedition that ever went through Africa in the nineteenth century. Utilizing the very full records that exist, including the remarkable diary of Emin Pasha himself, Dr Smith gives a vivid and scholarly account of the expedition. 6 plates 4 maps £6.50 Oxford Studies in African Affairs

Saharan Myth and Saga

H. T. Norris

Myths and sagas about Muslim heroes and nations, fabulous cities, and the sources of the Sudanic Nile are current among the Saharans. Most of these records are recent, although they contain ancient material which has moulded much Muslim African tradition and provided a continuous cultural transfusion into inner Africa from the Middle East, especially Southern Arabia. 6 plates 2 line drawings 1 map £6 Oxford Library of African Literature

Colonist or Uitlander?

A Study of the British Immigrant in South Africa

John Stone

Since the establishment of South Africa as a Republic outside the Commonwealth in 1961, the number of British immigrants has risen sharply. This book attempts to explain the nature of the migration in terms of a general sociological model, supported by data drawn from a sample survey of post-war British immigrants. 8 text figures £5 Oxford Studies in African Affairs

Buganda in the Heroic Age

Michael Wright

A substantial amount of new evidence, much of it oral, appears in this history of Buganda at the end of the nineteenth century. The author has taken account of what the people who took part in the political and religious events of this period have to say – essentially an 'inside' view. This has led to a reassessment of many accepted generalizations on the period and the key people in it. 4 plates 3 maps £1.70 OUP Eastern Africa

The Roots of Segregation

Native Policy in Natal 1845–1910

David Welsh

Shepstone's system in Natal was the precursor of the later policy of segregation and also influenced events further north. Based on extensive research and familiarity with diverse racial and language groups, Dr Welsh's penetrating analysis highlights current issues in government, law, economic policy, and education in Africa generally. 1 table £6.25 OUP Southern Africa

South of the Sahara Development in African Economies

Edited by Sayre P. Schatz

This collection of essays examines the economic problems and strategies of the emerging African nations. Based on research in the field, the essays are grouped under four broad categories: Indigenous Entrepreneurship and Trade, Agriculture and Industry, Economic Policy and Finance, and International Economic Relations. Together they provide a comprehensive analysis of African economic development and a unique insight into the problems to be overcome.

Serfs, Peasants, and Socialists

A Former Serf Village in the Republic of Guinea

William Derman

Mr Derman discusses the profound transformations that have affected Fulbe society in the Republic of Guinea during three periods: the indigenous, the colonial, and independence. He focuses his attention on serfdom and describes life in a former serf village with emphasis on the changing relationships of the one-time serfs to the Fulbe, the French, and now the Guinean government.

The Boundary Politics of Independent Africa

Saadia Touval

There have been numerous disputes but surprisingly few major disruptions over the boundaries which have emerged since the late 1950's when many African states gained independence. In analyzing and evaluating the disputes that did erupt, the author looks at the political interaction of the states involved—their motives, their domestic and external pressures, and their use of force or diplomacy.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the businessman, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
