

Retirements

James B. Christoph retired August 1992 from Indiana University.

Joseph Hamburger retired July 1992 from Yale University.

Jerome B. King retired from the department of political science effective August 31, 1992.

Eugene J. Meehan, professor emeritus, University of Missouri–St. Louis.

William R. Nelson, chair, political science department and former vice president for academic affairs, James Madison University since 1973, effective August 31, 1992.

Thomas A. Palmer, department of political science, College of Charleston.

John Spanier, professor, University of Florida. For the next five years he will teach on a half-time basis.

Kurt K. Tweraser, associate professor emeritus, University of Arkansas.

Visiting and Temporary Appointments

Kenneth Cosgrove, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio University.

Richard Cox, professor, political science, State University of New York at Buffalo.

John C. Creed, visiting assistant professor, College of Charleston.

Mark R. Daniels, visiting assistant professor, University of Arkansas.

Robert Darcy, Regents Professor of Political Science and Statistics, Oklahoma State University, will spend the 1993 Hilary and Trinity terms as visiting academic in the political science department, Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland.

Paul Diesing, professor, political science, State University of New York at Buffalo.

David J. Lorenzo, visiting lecturer, University of Arkansas.

Malcolm Mackerras, senior lecturer, department of politics, University College, University of New South Wales and the Australian Defence Force Academy, will spend the fall 1992 semester as visiting professor of political science at Oklahoma State University.

Michael Marsh, senior lecturer, department of political science, Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland, will spend the spring 1993 semester as visiting professor of political science at Oklahoma State University.

Shaul Mishal, visiting professor of political science, Yale University, spring 1993.

Susan O. White, University of New Hampshire, will be a visiting scientist and director of the Law and Social Sciences Program of the National Science Foundation.

Ursula Münch, assistant professor, University of Munich, will teach during the spring 1993 term at the University of Minnesota.

Alan S. Zuckerman, Brown University, will be a visiting professor, department of political science, Tel-Aviv University, for 1992-93.

Award Recipients

1992-93 Woodrow Wilson Center Fellows

The Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars has announced the appointment of 34 Fellows for the academic year 1992-93. Chosen from 773 applicants from 67 countries, they will come to the Center from 10 states and the District of Columbia and 12 nations other than the United States.

The 34 Fellows appointed for 1992-93 are listed here with the titles of the projects they will pursue at the Woodrow Wilson Center.

Sadik J. Al-Azm, professor of modern European philosophy, Damascus University, Syria. "Islamic Fundamentalism Reconsidered."

György Bence, professor of social and moral philosophy, University of Budapest, Hungary. "The Fallacies of Studying Soviet-Style Systems: Why Did We Fail to See the Moment of Failure Coming in Eastern Europe?"

Michael T. Burns, associate professor of history, Mount Holyoke College. "Payments Due: The Paris Peace Conference of 1919 and the Promise of a New World Order."

Charles E. Butterworth, professor of political science, University of Maryland, College Park. "Revelation and Political Philosophy."

Hung-lam Chu, associate research fellow, Academia Sinica, Nan-King, Taipei, Taiwan, Republic of China. "Community Compacts as a Means for the Reproduction of Social Order in China, 14th-17th Centuries."

José Manuel Donoso, novelist, Santiago, Chile. "The Chilean Episode: A Novel."

James V. Feinerman, associate professor of law, Georgetown University. "China's Participation in the International Legal Order."

David H. Flaherty, professor of history and law, University of Western Ontario, Canada. "Privacy and Data Protection in the Private Sector: A Comparative Perspective."

Richard Wightman Fox, professor of history, Boston University. "Gospel of Modernity: Liberal Protestantism and American Culture."

Hermann B. Giliomee, professor of political studies, University of Cape Town, South Africa. "A Comparative Study of the Afrikaners as an Overextended Minority Group."

Richard H. Grove, college lecturer in environmental history, Churchill College, Cambridge University, United Kingdom. "The East India Company, the Indian Medical Service, and Environmental Medicine, 1770-1870."

Pablo Halpern, director of communications, Ministry of Finance, Santiago, Chile. "Public Opinion and Economic Policies During the Transition to Democracy in Chile."

Joseph Hamburger, professor of political and social science, Yale University. "Religion and Mill's On Liberty."

Mohamed Beshir Hamid, associate professor of political science, University of Khartoum, Sudan. "The Challenges of Democratization in Africa: Pluralist Pressures and State Responses."

Robert Hutchings, director for European Affairs, National Security Council, The White House. "End of the Cold War: American Diplomacy and Europe's Revolutions of 1989-91."

Donald R. Kelley, professor of history, Rutgers University. "Eclecticism, Enlightenment, and the History of Ideas."

Amy W. Knight, senior research specialist, Library of Congress. "Security Police and the Transition to a Civil Society: The Soviet Union as a Case Study."

Shepard Krech III, professor of anthropology, Brown University. "The North American Indian: Ecologist, Conservationist and Environmentalist?"

Frances Lannon, fellow and tutor in modern history, Lady Margaret Hall, Oxford University, United Kingdom. "Women, the Second Republic, and the Spanish Civil War."

Bozhong Li, associate professor of economic history, Zhejiang Academy of Social Sciences, Hangzhou, China. "The Baseline of China's Economic Modernization: The Late Imperial Economy of the Lower Yangzi in World Historical Perspective."

David A. Lipton, senior fellow, World Institute for Development Economics Research, Washington, D.C. "Poland's Economic Transformation After Three Years."

Inder Malhotra, freelance columnist, New Delhi, India. "India's Security: From Nehru to Narasimha Rao."

Jacob Metzger, associate professor of economics, Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Israel. "Economy and Ethnicity in Mandatory Palestine."

Boris N. Mironov, professor of history, Russian Academy of Sciences, St. Petersburg, Russia. "Urbanization in Russia, 1861-1914: Cross-Cultural Interpretation."

David Novak, professor of modern Judaic studies, University of Virginia. "The Doctrine of the Election of Israel: The Idea of the Chosen People."

Joseph S. Nye, Jr., professor of international affairs, Harvard University. "American Interest in a New World Order."

Andrejs Plakans, professor of history, Iowa State University. "Latvia in the Perestroika Period."

Evelyn S. Rawski, professor of history, University of Pittsburgh. "A Social History of the Qing Imperial Family."

Thomas George Rawski, professor of economics and history, University of Pittsburgh. "Reform of Innovation in Chinese Industry."

Alfred J. Rieber, professor of history, University of Pennsylvania. "The Politics of Reform in Imperial Russia, 1855-81."

David Harris Sacks, associate professor of history and humanities, Reed College, Portland, Oregon. "Monopoly and Liberty in Early Modern England, 1558-1649."

Kathryn Kish Sklar, professor of history, State University of New York, Binghamton. "Florence Kelley and Women's Political Culture: Doing the Nation's Work, 1900-30."

Jeffrey C. Stewart, assistant professor of history, George Mason University. "Enter the New Negro: Alain Locke and the Transformation of African American Culture, 1885-1954."

Reed T. Ueda, associate professor of history, Tufts University. "The Changing Idea of the Immigrant Nation: Immigration in the Historic and Moral Identity of 20th-Century America."

Jennings Randolph Program for International Peace 1992-93 Fellows and Scholars

Fifteen fellows recently named by the United States Institute of Peace will begin projects focusing on peace and security in several regions and broader topics affecting international peace. Areas receiving concentrated attention include the growing upheaval within and among the republics of the former Soviet Union and their international security policies; attempts at state building and regional cooperation in Africa; and ways to facilitate international negotiations.

Distinguished Fellows are eminent scholars and practitioners whose careers are marked by extraordinary achievement. Visiting Distinguished Fellows conduct special projects for shorter periods of time.

James Goodby, Distinguished Public Service Professor, Carnegie-Mellon University; former U.S. ambassador to Finland and head of delegation to Stockholm Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Satya Nandan, former Under-Secretary-General of the United Nations for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea; formerly Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Government of Fiji (Visiting).

Bereket Habte Selassie, professor of African studies and law at Howard University; former Attorney General of Ethiopia under Haile Selassie and, subsequently, Eritrean representative to the UN.

Robert Strausz-Hupé, president emeritus, Foreign Policy Research Institute; former U.S. ambassador to Sweden, Sudan, Belgium, Turkey, and NATO.

I. William Zartman, Jacob Blaustein Professor of Conflict Management and International Organization, School of Advanced International Studies, The Johns Hopkins University (Visiting).

Peace Fellows are persons whose careers demonstrate substantial accomplishments and promise for future leadership.

Leon Aron, resident scholar, American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research.

Mordechai Bar-On, fellow, Ben Gurion Research Center, Negev University, Israel; former Knesset member and co-founder of the Peace Now movement.

Pierre Du Toit, professor of political science, University of Stellenbosch, South Africa.

James George, staff member, House Committee on Government Operations; former assistant director, U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Nancie Gonzalez, professor of

People in Political Science

anthropology, Center for International Development and Conflict Management, University of Maryland at College Park.

Vladimir Ivanov, head of Asia-Pacific Regional Studies Department, Institute of World Economy and International Relations, Moscow.

Nancy Lubin, associate professor of political science, Carnegie-Mellon University.

Rajah Mohan, research associate, Institute for Defence Studies and Analyses, New Delhi, India.

Paul Schroeder, professor of history, University of Illinois.

Elizabeth Teague, senior research analyst, Radio Free Europe, Radio Liberty, Munich.

Peace Scholars are outstanding students in American university doctoral programs.

Pamela Chasek, Johns Hopkins University.

Richard Conroy, University of Notre Dame.

Ralph DiMuccio, University of Southern California.

Miles Hochstein, University of Southern California.

Barbara Larney, Arizona State University.

Martin Malin, Columbia University.

Martin Rouse, Cornell University.

Curtis Ryan, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

Jan Sallinger-McBride, University of California, Santa Barbara.

All awards are subject to final agreements between recipients and the Institute.

Congressional Research Grants Program

Eleven researchers, graduate students, and writers recently received funding through the Dirksen Center's Congressional Research Grants program.

First established in 1978, the Congressional Research Grants program has supported 156 projects by scholars examining the history, operation, performance, and leadership of the U.S. Congress. Though these grants are relatively small, they have served as seed money in the development of books, research articles, professional presentations, and doctoral dissertations.

This year's grant recipients include:

Nancy Beck, University of Texas at Austin. "Wright Patman and the Politics of Compromise: A Study in Congressional Leadership."

David Canon, University of Wisconsin. "Unconventional Lawmaking in the U.S. Congress."

Peter Felten, University of Texas at Austin. "J. William Fulbright's Leadership of Senate Opposition to the 1965-1966 U.S. Intervention in the Dominican Republic."

Patrick Fett, Vanderbilt University. "The President's Legislative Communications with Congress."

Jon Hale, University of Oklahoma. "Party Factionalism in Congress: The Case of the Democratic Leadership Council."

Jan Hardt, University of Maryland. "Strategies in Congressional Leadership Campaigns."

Connie Howard, Indiana University of Pennsylvania. "Who in the World Is Jeannette Rankin?"

James Savage, University of Virginia. "The Influence of Subcommittee Leadership in the House Appropriations Committee: The Chairmanship of William H. Natcher."

Matthew Schousen, Duke University. "The Politics of Congressional Reform: A Study of the Distribution of Power and Authority in the U.S. House of Representatives between 1890 and 1990."

Daniel Ward, Rice University. "Party Leadership in the U.S. Senate Committees."

Thomas Zeiler, University of Colorado. "Congress and the Forging of the International Trade Order, 1941-1965."

Hendrik Muller Prize

Arend Lijphart, University of California, San Diego, was awarded the

Dr. Hendrik Muller Prize in the Behavioral and Social Sciences by the Royal Netherlands Academy of Sciences for his innovative research on Dutch and comparative politics. This newly established, biennial, Dfl. 30,000 (about $15,000) prize is the highest award in the social and behavioral sciences in the Netherlands, and Lijphart is its first recipient.

Other Awards and Honors

Earl M. Baker, Pennsylvania State Senator, has been named "Legislator of the Year" by the National Republican Legislators Association.

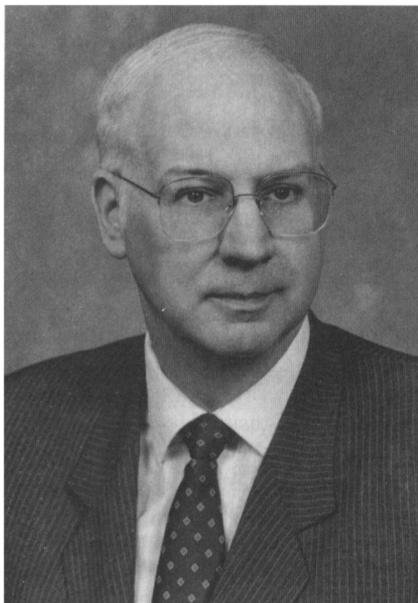

Earl M. Baker

Walter E. Beach, director, Heldref Publications, Helen Dwight Reid Educational Foundation, has received the Distinguished Alumni Award from Dickinson College.

Linda P. Brady, school of international affairs, Georgia Institute of Technology, has received the Outstanding Civilian Service Medal from the Department of the Army, for service as the John M. Olin Distinguished Professor of National Security Studies at the United States Military Academy during the 1991-92 academic year.

Dan Caldwell, professor of political science and chairman of the Council for International Studies at Pepper-dine University, was named the 1992 Professor of the Year by the student alumni association.

Walter E. Beach

Carl Q. Christol, professor emeritus of international law and political science, University of Southern California, received the International Academy of Astronautics Distinguished Book Award for his book Space Law: Past, Present, and Future (Kluwer Law and Taxation Publishers, 1991).

Carl Q. Christol

Cecil L. Eubanks, professor and chair of the department of political science, Louisiana State University, has been named Alumni Professor.

Cecil L. Eubanks

Jo Fraatz, associate professor of political science, St. Olaf College, was awarded a Certificate of Achievement for her participation as a Mondale Fellow for 1991-92 at the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota.

John R. Freeman, professor, University of Minnesota, has been awarded the all-university Morse-Alumni Award for Outstanding Contributions to Undergraduate Education. He was also presented with the College of Liberal Arts Teaching Award.

Lenneal J. Henderson, distinguished professor of government and public administration, University of Baltimore, has received the Distinguished Chair in Teaching Award for 1992-93.

Samuel B. Hoff, associate professor, Delaware State College, received the Employee of the Year for Faculty Excellence in Research award.

Evron M. Kirkpatrick, Helen Dwight Reid Educational Foundation, received the Policy Studies Organization 1992 Hubert H. Humphrey Award. The award is made to a political scientist who has been an outstanding public policy practitioner.

Samuel B. Hoff

David J. Olson has been named the inaugural holder of the Harry Bridges Endowed Chair in Labor Studies at the University of Washington.

David Pfeiffer, Suffolk University, Mary Ann Allard, Social Science Research Department at the Shriver Center, and Martha McGaughey, Training and Research Institute for People with Disabilities, have received a grant from the National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research to study and evaluate the implementation of the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Nelson Polsby, director of the Institute of Governmental Studies at the University of California, Berkeley, received an honorary degree of Doctor of Letters from the University of Liverpool.

J. Martin Rochester, associate professor, University of Missouri-St. Louis, received the 1991 Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Teaching.

Richard Rose, professor of public policy, University of Strathclyde, has been elected a Fellow of the British Academy.

Wayne Sandholtz, Scripps College, is one of 10 American scholars who have been awarded a grant from the German Marshall Fund of the United States.

Nelson W. Polsby

Vivien A. Schmidt, University of Massachusetts at Boston, received a special award for her book, Democratizing France (Cambridge University Press, 1990) in the context of the Gaston Defferre Prize Ceremony, sponsored by the Institute for Decentralization, and presented during the national conference "Ten Years of Decentralization" in Marseilles. During the spring 1991, she held a Fulbright Senior Research Scholar

Vivien A. Schmidt

Award in Paris to work on French industrial policy.

Garrett Ward Sheldon, associate professor and chair, received the Distinguished Faculty Award for Excellence in Scholarship from Clinch Valley College of the University of Virginia for his book, The Political Philosophy of Thomas Jefferson (Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1991).

Garrett Ward Sheldon

Edward Tufte, professor of political science and statistics, and senior critic in graphic design, Yale University, received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters from The Cooper Union in New York.

Charles R. Wise, Indiana University, and Rosemary O'Leary, Syracuse University, have been awarded the William E. Mosher Award presented for the best academic article in the Public Administration Review for 1992.

In Memoriam

Max Lerner

Max Lerner was the "complete political scientist"—teacher, scholar, lecturer, essayist, author of notable books on politics, political thought, constitutionalism. He was many other things—mentor, columnist, radio and television personality, a student of American culture who also, in his words, "embraced selective elements of the Californian sub-culture."

Born in Minsk, Russia, on December 20, 1902, Max Lerner was brought to the United States at the age of five. Educated at Yale and at Washington University, he received his Ph.D. from the Robert Brookings Graduate School of Economics in 1927. He in effect undertook another, enlarged graduate program as assistant editor, then managing editor, of the first Encyclopedia of the Social Sciences. He taught politics and related courses at Sarah Lawrence, Williams College, and Brandeis University.

His first notable writing was It Is Later Than You Think (1938), which served as a clarion call for liberals who were horrified by Hitler but uncertain what the United States should do, and who were disillusioned by the New Deal but unsure what economic and political strategy to follow. As editor of The Nation and later of the newspaper PM, he urged a militant stand against Hitlerism and, in domestic policy, economic planning against the continuing recession. His Ideas Are Weapons and Ideas for the Ice Age gathered his scattered writings into two powerful volumes. His great and lasting work, America As a Civilization, was a measured and insightful yet dramatic survey of the United States as a unique culture, society, and polity.

In his writings Max Lerner spoke as a scholarly political scientist as well as militant liberal, willing to confront exacting questions such as majority rule, minority rights, judicial review, presidential power, congressional politics. Along with some of his penetrating writings on constitutional problems in scholarly journals, perhaps his most lasting contribution to political science was his editorship, with extensive commentaries, of The Mind and Faith of Justice Holmes. Still showing remarkable intellectual versatility in his mid-eighties, he wrote Wrestling With the Angel, a moving account of his long battle against cancer.

Above all Max Lerner was a teacher—in the classroom, in his lectures and essays and columns and books. Those who confronted him—and were confronted by him—in