Shakespeare's English Kings

History, Chronicle, and Drama

Peter Saccio

'This compact book sets out with exemplary clarity and lively style the relevant history as it was in fact, as it was interpreted by Shakespeare's sources, and as it was illuminated by Shakespeare himself. Pleasure and satisfaction in his history plays will be greatly enhanced if Mr. Saccio's highly readable guide is at hand.' Sunday Times. £1.75 Oxford Paperbacks

Artaud and After

Ronald Hayman

The French poet, playwright, actor, and director Antonin Artaud, who died in 1948, lived mostly in poverty and suffering, yet has had perhaps the greatest single influence of any single figure on contemporary theatre in the West. 'Intriguing study . . . a sympathetic portrait of this outré personality.' The Times. £6 Oxford Paperbacks £2.25

Dimetos and Two Early Plays

Athol Fugard

Athol Fugard's latest play, Dimetos, was commissioned for the 1975 Edinburgh Festival, and revived the following year at the Nottingham Playhouse and in the West End of London with Paul Scofield in the title role. The two early plays are No-good Friday and Nongogo, both for almost entirely black casts. £4.25 Oxford Paperbacks £1.95

The Stagecraft of Aeschylus

Observations on the Dramatic Use of Exits and Entrances in Greek Tragedy

Oliver Taplin

By examining the timing and manner of exits and entrances in Aeschylus this book approaches the use of stage action as an essential element in the dramatist's overall meaning. While primarily directed at classics specialists, the book's theatrical preoccupations and emphasis on Greek tragedy as a performing art make it of interest to all students of the history of the theatre and of dramatic technique. £20
