DR. JOSEPH WEINBERG

AUGUST MEMBER OF THE MONTH

The University of Southern Mississippi

“Beyond the usual challenges of any academic career, I think political scientists face the additional challenge of a constantly changing landscape. In order to keep our teaching and research relevant, we must be able to keep up with a great deal of real-time information and adapt for our students very quickly.”

DR. URIEL ABULOF

OCTOBER MEMBER OF THE MONTH

Tel-Aviv University

“I encourage my students to keep the fire going. How to do that is for each to find out, but without it, I don’t see how, but more so why, anyone would want to pursue political science. For me, keeping the fire going meant living this world first, thinking of theories later, until they entwine to enrich each other. We often teach theories so intensely that our students lose sight of the world as it is, and view it as a collection of case studies awaiting theory testing. It should be the other way around: behold this world, the people near and far, and discover what truly fascinates you, where you truly see puzzles – questions you have no answers for, not hypotheses to be tested.”
