NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

JAMES E. CRONIN is Assistant Professor of History at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. His book, The Dynamics of Industrial Conflict in Britain, 1888-1974, is scheduled for publication this fall. Current research includes a comparative study of social conflict in Europe during the early twentieth century.

JAMES L. GILLESPIE is Assistant Professor of History at Catawba College. He has written several articles on Richard II—in Albion (1975) and The Historian (1978)—and is now working on a translation and edition of Thomas Otterbourne's Chronicle.

IAIN HAMPSHER-MONK is Lecturer in the Department of Politics, University of Exeter, England. He has written on the Levellers in Political Studies (1976) and on Locke in the Journal of the History of Ideas (1979). Current research concerns Burke and the English reaction to the French revolution.

MARGARET HASTINGS is Emeritus Professor of History, having taught at Douglass College, Rutgers University for many years. Her publications include The Court of Common Pleas in Fifteenth Century England (1947) and High History or Hack History (1962). She is now working on Thomas More as a lawyer, in particular his career as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

CARLA H. HAY is Assistant Professor of History at Marquette University. Her article, "Benjamin Franklin, James Burgh, and 'The Colonist's Advocate' Letters," appeared in the William and Mary Quarterly (1975). An intellectual biography of Burgh is now in press. She is writing a biography of Catharine Macaulay and is also completing research on a study of John Sawbridge and 'popular politics' in late eighteenth-century London.

RONALD W. HERLAN is Assistant Professor of History at State University College at Brockport, New York. He has published two articles on parochial poverty and poor relief in seventeenth-century London in Guildhall Studies in London History (1976, 1977) and is now writing an essay entitled "Poor Relief in the Bristol Parish of Temple in the Age of the Early Stuarts and the English Revolution."

FRANCIS C. JAMES is Professor of History at Newcomb College, Tulane University. His books include North Country Bishop: A Biography of William Nicolson (1956) and Ireland in the Empire, 1688-1770 (1973), and he has written two articles on eighteenth-century Ireland in the William and Mary Quarterly (1963) and the English Historical Review (1966). He is now working on the Irish House of Lords from 1660 to 1800.

ELISABETH G. KIMBALL has retired from the Educational Testing Service in Princeton. She has published Serjeanty Tenure in Medieval England, Rolls of the Warwickshire and Coventry Sessions of the Peace, 1377-1397, and other records of the justices of the peace in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries.

DAVID UNDERDOWN is Munroe-Goodwin-Wilkinson Professor of History at Brown University. His books include Royalist Conspiracy in England 1649-60 (1960), Pride's Purge (1971), and Somerset in the Civil War and Interregnum (1973). His articles have appeared in the English Historical Review, Past and Present, and J.B.S. At present he is working on a comparative study of regional allegiance in the English civil wars.

STEPHEN D. WHITE is Assistant Professor of History at Wesleyan University. He has recently published Sir Edward Coke and "The Grievances of the Commonwealth," 1621-1628 (1979); and his articles include "Succession to Fiefs in Early Medieval England," Past and Present (1974) and "English Feudalism and Its Origins," American Journal of Legal History (1975). He is now doing research on methods of settling disputes in northern France and England during the eleventh and twelfth centuries.

CHARLES T. WOOD is Professor and Chairman of the Department of History at Dartmouth College. His books include The French Apanages and the Capetian Monarchy 1224-1328 (1966), The Age of Chivalry: Manners and Morals 1000-1450 (1970), and Philip the Fair and Boniface VIII (2nd ed., 1976). Among his articles on English historical topics are "The Deposition of Edward V," Traditio (1975) and "The Right to Rule in England . . . 1327-1485" (with William H. Dunham, Jr.) American Historical Review (1976). He is working on a comparative study of parliament and the church in France and England during the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries.
