

Activities

Morgan N. Knull, a doctoral candidate in the department of political science at Louisiana State University, has been named editor of the Civil War Book Review.

Lord Norton of Louth, professor of government, University of Hull (UK), has been appointed by leader of the Conservative Party, William Hague, to head a commission on strengthening parliament. The commission will make recommendations for strengthening democratic control of government in the UK.

Laura R. Olson, department of political science, Clemson University, is spending the 1999–2000 academic year as a research fellow at the Center for the Study of Religion, Princeton University. While at Princeton she is working as part of the Pew-funded Mainline Protestantism Project.

Nelson W. Polsby, professor of political science at the University of California, Berkeley, will become chairman of the Citizens' Research Foundation's Scholars' Network as CRF moves from the University of Southern California to UC-Berkeley. Polsby will also oversee CRF's academic research along with Senior Research Fellow Anthony Corrado of Colby College.

David B. Walker, professor, department of political science, University of Connecticut, was elected a member of the Board of Trustees of the National Academy of Public Administration.

Marvin G. Weinbaum, professor emeritus, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, and former director of the UIUC Program in South Asian and Middle Eastern Studies, has assumed a position as foreign affairs analyst with the Bureau of Intelligence and Research, U.S. Department of State.

Administrative Appointments

L. Jerold Adams, chair, department of political science and geography, Central Missouri State University.

Christopher J. Anderson, director, graduate studies, department of political science, Binghamton University-SUNY.

Larry Berman, director, University of California Center in Washington.

David Cingranelli, director, undergraduate studies, department of political science, Binghamton University-SUNY.

Richard Elling, chair, department of political science, Wayne State University.

John Elliott, chair, department of political science, Kenyon College.

Gary L. Gregg, Mitch McConnell Chair in Leadership, University of Louisville, and director, McConnell Center for Political Leadership; formerly, director, Intercollegiate Studies Institute.

Joel B. Grossman, acting chair, department of political science, Johns Hopkins University.

Mary Herring, graduate director, department of political science, Wayne State University.

Arthur T. Johnson, provost and vice president for academic affairs, University of Maryland, Baltimore County.

Daniel H. Levine, chair, department of political science, University of Michigan.

Michael McDonald, chair, department of political science, Binghamton University-SUNY.

Ken Rodman, chair, department of government, Colby College.

FOR THE RECORD

From the classroom to the boardroom. That is David Adamany's latest move. The former Wayne State University president and professor of political science assumed the position of interim CEO of the struggling Detroit Public School system in May.

His first challenge and success was to settle a bitter labor dispute between the Teachers Union and the city, which he accomplished earlier this summer. Adamany's current mission: "To begin changing the culture of Detroit Public Schools, finding new and better ways to get things done." Adamany has taken on such challenges before. Assuming the role of president at Wayne State University in 1982, he elevated a little-known city university with considerable debt to the lofty ranks of the top research universities. He did not seek out the current job, though. People from Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer and Michigan Governor John Engler to business leaders urged him to take the position.

Adamany earned a master's and Ph.D in political science from the University of Michigan. His career began in 1963, when he became the youngest person appointed to the Wisconsin Public Service Commission. He went on to teach or work as an administrator at the University of Wisconsin, Wesleyan University, California State University, Long Beach, and the University of Maryland. He has been teaching political science and law at Wayne State since his retirement as president of the university in 1997.

Donald E. Schulz, chair, department of political science, Cleveland State University; formerly, U.S. Army War College.

Shalendra Sharma, chair, master of arts program in Asia-Pacific studies, University of San Francisco.

Clifford L. Staten, dean of social sciences, Indiana University Southeast.

Stephen Wright, chair, department of political science, Northern Arizona University.

New Appointments

Ariel Armony, assistant professor, department of government, Colby College.

Jeffrey D. Berejikian, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Georgia.

Sue Davis, program director, American Political Science Association; formerly, Grand Valley State University.

Douglas Dion, associate professor, department of political science, University of Iowa.

Erick Duchesne, assistant professor, department of political science, University at Buffalo—SUNY.

Keith R. Eakins, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Central Oklahoma.

Douglas Gibler, assistant professor, University of Kentucky, formerly a postdoctoral fellow at Stanford University.

Sanford Gordon, assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio State University.

Catherine Hafer, assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio State University.

Rodney Hall, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Iowa.

Pamela K. Jensen, Kenyon College, has been named Kenyon's first Harry Clor Professor of Political Science, Kenyon College. Upon accepting the professorship in July 1999, Jensen became the first tenured female professor to be named to an endowed chair at the college. This past spring, Jensen was senior fellow at the Liberty Fund.

James M. Lindsay has joined the Foreign Policy Studies Program at The Brookings Institution as a senior fellow. A former member of the National Security Council, he will conduct research on American foreign policy and international relations. Prior to joining Brookings he was on the faculty at the University of Iowa.

Antonio L. Rappa, assistant professor of political science at the National University of Singapore, was reappointed general editor of NUS' Centre for Advanced Studies Research Paper Series. Rappa received his doctorate in political science from the University of Hawaii, Manoa in 1997.

Gilbert Khadiagala, associate professor of comparative politics and African studies at the Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies, Johns Hopkins University, has been named consulting director of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars' newly established African Project.

Yvette Alex-Assensoh, assistant professor of political science at Indiana University, received a $45,000 grant from the National Academy of Education/Spencer Postdoctoral Fellowship. During her fellowship year, she will examine how race and economics interact with education in affecting the political orientations, policy dispositions and civic involvement of American high school students in two Midwestern cities. Alex-Assensoh is an alumnae of the APSA Ralph Bunche Summer Institute.

Jun Yin, a former staff assistant at APSA, has accepted a position as Senior Research Associate at T.E. Systems, Inc., a management consulting firm. Yin will be responsible for providing analytical support on client projects, management consulting, and conducting economic analyses.

Bruce E. Cain, Robson Professor of Political Science at the University of California, Berkeley, has been named director of the Institute of Governmental Studies. Cain will be the sixth director of IGS. Previously, Cain served as associate director of the Institute.

Karen A. Mingst, a professor in the department of political science at the University of Kentucky, was named the College of Arts and Sciences Distinguished Professor for the 1999–2000 academic year. She has been released from teaching for the fall semester and will give a public lecture on her research in the spring.

Thomas P. Wolf, formerly dean of social sciences at Indiana University Southeast, has been named professor emeritus of political science. He will continue to teach at IU-Southeast and to serve as editor of The British Politics Group Newsletter.

Pei-te Lien, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Utah, has recently received awards from the Social Science Research Council and National Science Foundation. She has accepted a one-year postdoctoral fellowship from the SSRC's International Migration Program to study "Asian Americans and Political Participation—Exploring the Missing Links," and also taken a 18-month grant from the NSF to complete "A Pilot Study of the National Asian American Political Survey."

Ange-Marie Hancock, Irvine Fellow, department of politics, University of San Francisco.

Audrey A. Haynes, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Georgia.

Arthur C. Helton, senior fellow and director, Forced Migration Projects, Council on Foreign Relations.

Errol Henderson, associate professor of political science, Wayne State University; formerly University of Florida.

Stephen M. Hill, Franklin Teaching Fellow and temporary assistant professor, department of political science, University of Georgia.

Charles C. Hinnant, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Georgia.

M.V. "Trey" Hood III, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Georgia.

Ted Hopf, assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio State University; formerly University of Michigan.

Mark S. Hurwitz, assistant professor, department of political science, University at Buffalo–SUNY.

Alexander H. Kaufman, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Georgia.

Kendra A. King, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Georgia.

Peter Kingstone, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Connecticut.

Joseph L. Klesner, chair of faculty, Kenyon College.

Kevin Deegan Krause, assistant professor of political science, Wayne State University.

Volker Krause, assistant professor, department of political science, Northern Arizona University.

Beth Leech, assistant professor, department of political science, Rutgers University; formerly, Texas A&M University.

Tom Loveless, director, Brown Center on Educational Policy, and senior fellow, governmental studies, The Brookings Institution; formerly, Harvard University.

Brenda Lyshaug, instructor, department of political science, University of Utah.

Clark A. Miller, assistant professor of political science, Iowa State University; formerly, Harvard University.

Layna Mosley, assistant professor, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame.

Diana Mutz, professor, department of political science and department of journalism and communication, Ohio State University; formerly, University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Daniel N. Nelson, professor of democratization and civil-military relations, George C. Marshall Center for European Security Studies (Germany).

Martin A. Nie, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota, Duluth.

David Ostergren, assistant professor, department of political science and Center for Environmental Science, Northern Arizona University.

Matthew Potoski, assistant professor of political science, Iowa State University; formerly, University of Kentucky.

Denise Powers, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Iowa.

David Redlawsk, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Iowa.

Jeffrey M. Sellers, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Southern California.

Michael E. Smith, assistant professor of political science, Georgia State University.

Devin Stauffer, assistant professor of political science, Kenyon College; formerly, St. John's College (MD).

James Taylor, assistant professor, department of politics, University of San Francisco.

Alex Tuckness, assistant professor of political science, Iowa State University; formerly, Princeton University.

Ashutosh Varshney, associate professor with tenure, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame; formerly, Columbia University.

Craig Warkentin, assistant professor, department of political science, Oswego State University.

Beth Kinsley Warner, Franklin Teaching Fellow and temporary assistant professor, department of political science, University of Georgia.

S. Laurel Weldon, assistant professor, department of political science, Purdue University.

Richard Witmer, assistant professor, department of political science, Northern Arizona University.

Jakub Zielinski, assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio State University.

Promotions

Christopher J. Anderson, professor of political science, Binghamton University—SUNY.

Kenneth J. Dautrich, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Connecticut.

Bruce Dickson, associate professor of political science and international affairs with tenure, George Washington University.

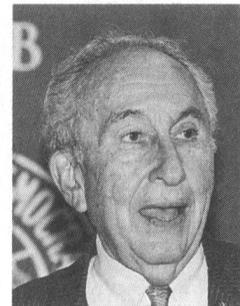

Richard J. Ellis, Mark O. Hatfield Professor of Politics, Willamette University.

Martha Liebler Gibson, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Connecticut.

Max Kampelman, lawyer, diplomat, and negotiator, received the Presidential Medal of Freedom from President Clinton in August. The Medal of Freedom is the highest honor an American civilian can receive from the federal government.

Currently vice chairman of the United States Institute of Peace and chairman of Georgetown University's Institute for the Study of Diplomacy, Kampelman headed the U.S. delegation to the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe from 1980 to 1983. He also served as head of the U.S. delegation to Negotiations with the Soviet Union on Nuclear and Space Arms during the late 1980s. As the president noted, Kampelman did much as an ambassador to keep "human rights at the center of East-West relations" and to set the stage for important arms reduction treaties like START II.

Kampelman also received the Presidential Citizens Medal from President Ronald Reagan in 1989 in recognition of his "exemplary deeds of service" to the country and its citizens and was an inaugural recipient of APSA's Goodnow Award, which was given in recognition of his long service to the Association and his important contributions to the profession of political science.

Daryl B. Harris, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Connecticut.

Samuel B. Hoff, George Washington Distinguished Professor of History and Political Science, Delaware State University.

Margaret Keck, professor, department of political science, Johns Hopkins University.

Joseph L. Klesner, professor and director, international studies program, department of political science, Kenyon College. During 1998–99 Klesner served as chair of the faculty at Kenyon and continues in that role for 1999–2000.

Michael Mintrom, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Michigan State University.

J. Steven Ott, professor, department of political science, University of Utah.

Marjorie Sarbaugh-Thompson, associate professor, department of political science, Wayne State University.

Randall Schweller, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Ohio State University.

Elliott Slotnick, professor, department of political science, Ohio State University.

Lowell Turner, professor, School of Industrial and Labor Relations, Cornell University.

Stephen Zunes, associate professor, department of politics, University of San Francisco.

Retirements

Ron Beeson, professor, department of political science, University of Central Oklahoma.

Harry M. Clor, Distinguished Teaching Professor of Political Science, Kenyon College. Clor will continue to teach in an emeritus capacity.

Henry Krisch, professor, department of political science, University of Connecticut.

Everett C. Ladd, professor, department of political science and director, Roper Center, University of Connecticut.

James L. Waite, professor and chair, department of political science and geography, Central Missouri State University. Waite has accepted an adjunct professorship at Utah State University. He will also be a visiting professor at the University of Vaxjo, Sweden, during the Spring term 2000.

Visiting and Temporary Positions

Farid Abdel-Nour, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University of Utah.

Michelle A. Benson, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University at Buffalo–SUNY.

Cynthia Boaz, visiting assistant professor, department of politics, University of San Francisco.

Pamela Camerra-Rowe, visiting assistant professor of political science, Kenyon College.

Sonia Cardenas, visiting assistant professor, department of government and international relations, University of Notre Dame; formerly of University of Virginia.

David Clark, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University of Iowa.

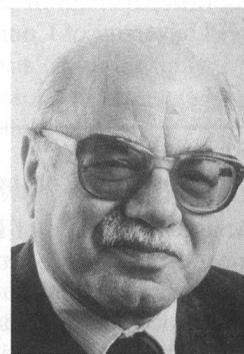

Alfonso Damico, visiting professor, department of political science, University of Iowa.

KUDOS

Daniel Bell, Henry Ford II Professor of Social Sciences Emeritus at Harvard University, was recently awarded the European Institute of Public Administration's Prix Tocqueville. Conferred every other year on a person, or group of people, who have distinguished themselves by their work and commitment to the betterment of public administration in Europe, the prize has previously been given to Karl Popper and Octavio Paz.

Best known for cofounding The Public Interest with Irving Kristol in the mid-1960s and for coining the phrase "post-industrial society" for the title of his 1973 book, The Coming of the Post-Industrial Society, Bell has written extensively on the problems and promise of the information revolution. His The End of Ideology: On the Exhaustion of Political Ideas in the Fifties (1988) and The Cultural Contradictions of Capitalism (1976) both made the Times Literary Supplement's list of the 100 most important books of the second half of the twentieth century.

Bell is currently a scholar in residence at the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and a former member of the President's Commission on Technology (1964–66) and the President's Commission on a National Agenda for the 1980s (1979). His latest book is a collection of lectures he delivered in Tokyo during 1998 titled The Future of Technology and World Society (Japanese ed., Tachibana).

Albert Dzur, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University of Utah.

Todd Foglesong, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University of Utah.

Tracy R. Jarvis, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University at Buffalo–SUNY.

James Marquardt, visiting professor, department of government, Colby College.

Andrew Milton, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, Northern Arizona University; formerly, University of Puget Sound.

Husam Mohamad, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University of Central Oklahoma.

Michelle Mood, visiting assistant professor of political science, Kenyon College.

Charles Riemann, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University of Connecticut.

Awards

ACLS Fellowship Competitions

The American Council of Learned Societies recently named its 1999 fellowship winners. Seven of the grants awarded to American scholars went to political scientists. Below are the names of the political scientists and the program under which they were awarded fellowships.

Alan Gilbert, professor of political science, University of Denver. ACLS Fellowship Program.

Nancy Haggard-Gilson, lecturer in political science, California State University, San Marcos. ACLS Fellowship Program.

Christopher D. Howard, assistant professor of government, College of William and Mary. ACLS Fellowship Program.

Paul D. Hutchcroft, assistant professor of political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison. ACLS Fellowship Program.

Joshua A. Tucker, doctoral candidate, department of government, Harvard University. East European Studies Postdoctoral Fellowships.

Keith E. Whittington, assistant professor of political science, Princeton University. ACLS Fellowship Program.

Sharon L. Wolchik, professor of political science, George Washington University. East European Studies Postdoctoral Fellowships.

Charlotte W. Newcombe Doctoral Dissertation Fellowships

Charlotte W. Newcombe Doctoral Dissertation Fellowships have been awarded to 35 graduate students for research and writing on some aspect of ethical or religious values. Among the recipients are three political scientists.

Kevin R. Den Dulk, department of political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison; “Representing Christ in Court: Political Litigation and the Reconfiguring of American Evangelicalism.”

Anne S. Kleinman, department of politics, Yale University; “Politics and Morality in Housing: The Case of Hong Kong and Public Housing.”

Jillian L. Locke, department of political science, Rutgers University; “Virtue and the Politics of Shame.”

Policy Studies Organization Names 1999 Winners

The Policy Studies Organization presented its annual awards during a luncheon ceremony in Atlanta, GA as part of the 1999 APSA Annual Meeting.

Harold D. Lasswell Award

Frank Fischer, Rutgers University, and Richard Rose, University of Strathclyde, for outstanding scholarship in contributing to our understanding of the substance or process of public policy.

Donald Campbell Award

Eleanor Chelimsky for being an outstanding methodological innovator in policy studies.

Hubert H. Humphrey Award

Andrew Young, former mayor of Atlanta, for being an outstanding public policy practitioner.

Theodore Lowi Award

Richard Lotspeich, Indiana State University, for the best article in the Policy Studies Journal in 1998–99.

Jeffrey Pressman Award

Laura Reese, Wayne State University, for the best article in the Policy Studies Review in 1998–99.

Thomas R. Dye Award

Given to all funders of PSO books for outstanding service to the Policy Studies Organization.

Robert Lane Award

Martin Levin, Brandeis University, for outstanding service as PSO President.

Miriam K. Mills Award

David Kumar, Florida Atlantic University, for an outstanding young person and/or woman in the policy studies field.

Aaron Wildavsky Award

Jeffrey Berry, Tufts University, for the best policy studies book in 1998–99, The New Liberalism.

Don Hadwiger Award

Peter DeLeon, University of Colorado, Denver, and Myrna Mandell, California State University, Northridge, for the best PSO book or journal symposium in 1998–99.

Other Awards

David N. Atkinson, professor of political science and law, University of Missouri, Kansas City, was named University of Missouri Curators' Distinguished Teaching Professor for his outstanding teaching over the past 30 years.

Charles E. Butterworth, professor, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, has been awarded a Senior Fulbright Grant to the Friedrich-Alexander University of Erlangen-Nurnberg, Germany for the period October 1999–March 2000. Butterworth has also been appointed as a visiting professor at the Institut du Monde Arabe for April and May 2000. The appointment calls for him to deliver a series of six public lectures titled "Des Origines de la philosophie politique en Islam" (On the Origins of Political Philosophy in Islam).

Sheldon Kamieniecki, professor, department of political science, University of Southern California, has received the 1999 Raubenheimer Outstanding Senior Faculty Award.

Mary Keys, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame, received a grant from the George W. Strake foundation.

Lorna Knott, department of political science, Kenyon College, has been named Bradley Fellow in the department for 1999–2000.

James LaPlant, assistant professor of political science, Valdosta State University, received the 1998 University of Oklahoma Provost's Dissertation Award in the social sciences and professions category for his dissertation, "Political Learning in Adolescence: A Survey of Political Awareness and Attitudes of Middle School Students in the Heartland."

Scott Mainwaring, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame, received a research grant from the U.S.

CORRECTION

The PS staff allowed a number of errors to slip by in the September issue. Our apologies to J. Patrice McSherry whose gender we actually changed in September. McSherry (right) was recently promoted to associate professor at Long Island University, Brooklyn Center. Susan Hansen, newly promoted professor at the University of Pittsburgh spells her name H-a-n-s-e-n not H-a-n-s-o-n as we printed before. And our apologies to Stephen Farnsworth at Mary Washington College for the misspelling of his name.

J. Patrice McSherry

Institute of Peace for an international conference on institutional design, conflict management, and democracy in the late twentieth century.

John A. Maltese, associate professor of political science, University of Georgia, received the 1999 Sandy Beaver Award for Excellence in Teaching, awarded by the Franklin College of Arts and Sciences.

Mark C. Miller, associate professor of American government, Clark University, has been selected as a 1999–2000 Judicial Fellow at the U.S. Supreme Court.

James P. Pfiffner, professor, department of public and international affairs, George Mason University, was presented the Scholarly Award of the College of Arts and Sciences. His award address was titled "Character and the Modern Presidency: Public Acts and Political Judgment."

Don Racheter, professor, department of political science, Central College, was awarded the first annual Vernon Van Dyke Award by the Iowa Conference of Political Scientists at its meetings last November in Ames, Iowa. The award is in honor of the late Vernon Van Dyke of the University of Iowa and goes to an individual who has demonstrated excellence in serving the political science community in Iowa and beyond.

Andy Reynolds, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame, received a research grant from the U.S. Institute of Peace for an international conference on institutional design, conflict management, and democracy in the late twentieth century.

Brad R. Roth, assistant professor, department of political science, Wayne State University was the 1999 winner of the American Society of International Law Certificate of Merit for his book Governmental Illegitimacy in International Law (Oxford University Press, 1999).

Max J. Skidmore, professor of political science, University of Missouri, Kansas City, was named Curators' Professor for his outstanding scholarly efforts.

Christine Wolbrecht, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame, received a National Science Foundation grant for "Collaborative Research on Women's Voting Behavior in the 1920s and Early 1930s."

David B. Yalof, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Connecticut, was named the winner of the national competition for the best dissertation on the American presidency sponsored by the Center for Presidential Studies, George Bush School of Government and Public Service, Texas A&M University. His dissertation was "Choosing Supreme Court Nominees: Selection Politics From Truman to Reagan."

Quansheng Zhao, professor and director, division of comparative and regional studies, American University, received the Soka University Award of Highest Honor from the university's founder, Daisaku Ikeda, and president, Kinnosuke Komuro in June.

Susan Zlomke, assistant professor, Emory and Henry College (VA), received the first Heinz Eulau Fellowship from the Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research. Zlomke attended both sessions of ICPSR's Summer Program as a Program Scholar.

Catherine Zuckert, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame, received a grant from the Olin Foundation to support two graduate fellowships in political philosophy.

Michael Zuckert, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame, received a grant from the Olin Foundation to support two graduate fellowships in political philosophy.