Mr. Chester Rowell, recently elected a member of the executive council of the American Political Science Association, has resigned as a member of the United States shipping board and has returned to California as a member of the state railroad commission.

Professor Raymond G. Gettell, of Amherst College, will give courses in political theory and in American government at the summer session of the University of California.

Professor Quincy Wright, of the University of Minnesota, will give courses in international law and American diplomatic history at the summer session of Columbia University.

Professor Arthur N. Holcombe, of Harvard University, is to give two courses in political science during the summer quarter at Stanford University.

Professor C. D. Allin, of the University of Minnesota, recently delivered addresses on current British politics at the University of Nebraska, the University of Colorado, and Colorado College, under the auspices of the Institute of International Education.

Professor Lindsay Rogers, of the University of Virginia, has resigned in order to accept a professorship of political science at Columbia University.

Professor Edward S. Corwin, of Princeton University, has been granted a leave of absence for the second semester and is spending the time in England.

The American City Bureau has arranged to hold a summer session for the secretaries in the fourteen western states at Stanford University during the first part of August.

In connection with his work as director of the bureau for government research at Minnesota, Professor W. M. Anderson has prepared an interesting pamphlet, entitled Minneapolis Charter Problems, which has been published by the Woman's Club of Minneapolis, and an outline of the government of Minnesota, which has been published by the Minnesota Republican woman's state executive committee.

Professor Edgar Dawson has resumed his courses at Hunter College after a year spent, mainly in California, in study of the problems of instruction in civics. On his way east he held conferences on this subject at a number of universities. The results of his investigations will appear in a bulletin of the United States bureau of education.

Professor George E. Howard, of the University of Nebraska, has been granted a leave of absence for the year 1921-22. He will devote himself to writing.

Professor John M. Mathews, of the University of Illinois, will give courses in political science at the University of Nebraska during the second term of the coming summer session.

Dr. William S. Carpenter, recently on the staff of the Guaranty Trust Company, has been made an instructor in politics at Princeton University.

Professor W. W. Willoughby, of the Johns Hopkins University, has been given leave of absence for the remainder of the academic year, and has gone for a six months trip to Australia, the Dutch East Indies, and Siam. He will return in time to take up his university work at the beginning of the next academic year. During his absence Baron S. A. Korff, formerly of the University of Helsingfors, will lecture in the department of political science at Johns Hopkins on parliamentary government in Europe.

Mr. Edward C. Smith, instructor in political science at Lafayette College, has accepted a position in the political science department of New York University.

Dr. Charles McCarthy, director of the Wisconsin Legislative Reference Library, and a member of the executive council of the American Political Science Association, died at Phoenix, Arizona, on March 26.

Mr. C. G. Hoag, honorary secretary of the American proportional representation league, has returned from a European tour during which he conferred with leaders of the proportional representation movement in England, Belgium, Denmark, Sweden, Germany, and other lands.

Mr. Russell Ramsey, assistant secretary of the Philadelphia bureau of municipal research, has been made secretary of the bureau, succeeding Mr. Edward T. Paxton who has resigned to take up full-time research duties on the staff. Mr. Ramsey was formerly assistant secretary of the national municipal league.

Mr. Dorsey Hyde, Jr., formerly director of the New York Municipal Reference Library, and more recently in charge of the department of economic research of the Packard Motor Company, has become assistant director of the civics department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at Washington, D. C.

The joint committee on administrative reorganization of the Ohio general assembly has issued a numerous series of pamphlet reports and brief surveys relating to the state administration and plans for reorganization in that state. A large number of these were the work of W. H. Allen, of the Institute for Public Service, mainly on educational institutions and problems. C. E. Rightor and G. C. Cummins each prepared a number of reports. C. B. Galbreath made a study of administrative reorganization in other states. A summary of recommendations was written by D. C. Sowers.

Mr. George E. Frazer and Mr. Walter F. Dodd, who took part in the Illinois investigation and assisted in framing the administrative code for that state, have been retained to assist in formulating an administrative code for Ohio that will incorporate the important changes recommended by the above noted surveys.

Mr. Frank Dilnot, formerly editor of the London Globe, and representative in America for the London Daily Chronicle, gave a short series of lectures at the University of Illinois during April, on the revolution in England, Lloyd-George, and Czecho-Slovakia. He has also given lectures at several other universities in the United States.

Professor Roy Malcom, of the department of political science at the University of Southern California, has accepted the position of civic director of the Los Angeles city club.

Dr. L. S. Rowe, president of the American Political Science Association, recently delivered a lecture at Georgetown University on "America as a Factor in International Relations."

Professor James W. Garner, of the University of Illinois, is delivering the James Hazen Hyde lectures at some eight or ten provincial universities in France. He has also given six lectures in the faculty of law in the University of Paris on American political ideas and institutions. Three of these lectures were repeated at the École Libre des Sciences Politiques; and he has delivered six lectures on international law before the new École Internationale du Droit International which opened at the University of Paris in January under the auspices of Messrs. Fauchille, Alvarez, and De Lapradelle. During November and December Professor Garner visited Cambridge University, England, and delivered a lecture on American foreign policy. Following the visit to England he returned to Belgium and delivered lectures on American diplomacy at the University of Brussels and at the University of Ghent.

Lectures on civil rights are being given this semester, on the Fred Morgan Kirby Foundation, at Lafayette College, as follows: first month, on ideals of government, by Mr. Herbert A. Gibbons; second month, on constitutional aspects of civil rights, by Professor Francis N. Thorpe, of the University of Pittsburgh; third month, on the historical development of the American government, by Professor J. S. Bassett, of Smith College; fourth month, on the development of civil rights and political liberty in Great Britain, by Professor Thomas F. Moran, of Purdue University.

The Norman Wait Harris lectures for 1921 were given at Northwestern University in March by Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland, formerly joint parliamentary secretary for the British foreign office and board of trade, in charge of the department of overseas trade. The subject of the six lectures was the relation of the state to industry and commerce, with special reference to foreign trade.

The Pennsylvania commission on constitutional amendment, created in 1919, has completed its work and has submitted to the legislature a carefully prepared draft of a revised constitution, containing over one hundred and thirty changes in the present instrument. It remains for the legislature to decide whether to submit to the electorate the question of calling a convention. An account of the commission's work will be found in the March issue of the National Municipal Review.

The twenty-fifth annual meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Science will be held in Philadelphia on May 13-14. The general topic will be the place of the United States in a world organization for the maintenance of peace. The topics for the successive sessions are: the record of accomplishment of the existing League of Nations; the Monroe doctrine; effect of America's participation in a world organization on the doctrine; the possibility of disarmament by international agreement; the treatment of backward peoples in a world organization; the function of international courts and the means of enforcing their decisions; and the essentials of an effective world organization.

The second annual meeting of the Southwestern Political Science Association was held at Austin, Texas, March 24-26, 1921. Subjects taken up at the several sessions included state and local taxation, reorganization of state governments, land problems in the Southwest, and the relations between the United States and Mexico. Professor A. N. Holcombe, of Harvard University, gave two addresses. The officers for the ensuing year are: president, George Vaughn, Little Rock, Ark.; first vice-president, George B. Dealey, Dallas, Tex.; second vice-president, F. F. Blatchly, University of Oklahoma; third vice-president, D. Y. Thomas, University of Arkansas; secretary-treasurer, W. C. Binkley, University of Texas. Professor C. G. Haines, of the University of Texas, was re-elected managing editor of the Quarterly. The Association will meet in 1922 at the University of Oklahoma.

The twelfth annual meeting of the American Society of International Law was held at the Shoreham Hotel, Washington, D. C., April 27-30. The general topic for consideration was the advancement of international law, and it was taken up under four subdivisions previously assigned to sub-committees of the society's general committee on this subject. The meeting opened with an address by Hon. Elihu Root, president of the society; and papers were read by Hon. Manoel de Oliveira Lima, Mr. James Brown Scott, Professors George G. Wilson, Charles C. Hyde, Jesse S. Reeves, and others. The chairmen of the four sub-committees are: Messrs. Charles N. Gregory, Harry Pratt Judson, Simeon E. Baldwin, and Paul S. Reinsch.

The Institute for Government Research has recently added materially to its staff and has correspondingly increased the scope of its work. It is giving special attention to the preparation of volumes to appear in its series of "Service Monographs of the United States Government," two volumes of which were issued prior to the entrance of the United States into the war. It now has in preparation monographs dealing with the following services: bureau of war risk insurance, federal board for vocational education, bureau of public health, bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, United States shipping board, and bureau of mines. These services have been selected for immediate treatment because questions are likely to arise in connection with them in the studies now being made on reorganization of the administrative branch of the government.

A detailed manuscript study on administrative reorganization has also been completed, copies of which will be furnished to the members of the joint congressional committee, the President, and others who have to concern themselves with this problem.

A large amount of work is under way on the problems of budgetary technique. Special studies are also being made on the problems of personnel administration in connection with the proposals of the recent joint congressional committee on reclassification of salaries.

The most recent publication of the Institute is a volume entitled: Principles of Government Accounting and Reporting, by Francis Oakey.

Continental newspapers announce the early opening in Berlin of a Deutsche Hochschule für Politik. The plan springs mainly from the conviction that Germany suffered before and during the war from the lack of capable and trained political leaders. In general, the École Libre des Sciences Politiques in Paris is to be taken as a model; and it is hoped that through its teaching and research work, and by providing a common working center for the diffusion of civic education, the school may contribute substantially to the rehabilitation of Germany. Unlike the universities, the new school is not to be a state institution preparing for definite professional careers, but rather a free higher school, open without examination to students of all ages and of every special class. Among the teachers who have been announced are ministers of state Simons, Heinze, Scholz, Koch, and Groener; ex-ministers Delbrück, A. Müller, Schiffer, David, and Wissel; Professors Delbrück, Meinecke, Hoetzsch, Troelsch, Goetz, Sombart, Beyerle, and Radbruch; and among leaders in business and public affairs, Rohrbach, Hardorff, Rathenau, Roeseler, Sernig, Gertrud Bäumer, Buhlmann, and others.
