Freedom from Want

American Liberalism and the Idea of the Consumer
Kathleen G. Donohue

"An important contribution to the history of modern American liberalism. In a series of exceptionally acute readings of writers and activists both familiar and obscure, she makes a compelling case for an important shift in the estimate of the virtues of the consumer in American economic thought from the mid-nineteenth century through the New Deal."

The Big Vote

Gender, Consumer Culture, and the Politics of Exclusion,
1890s–1920s

Liette Gidlow

"Liette Gidlow illuminates not only the strategic and structural facets of the 'Get Out the Vote' campaigns of the 1920s but also the ways in which women and men, black and white, and in various regions of the country, pursued places for themselves in the public sphere.

Highly readable, this book provides important insights for all scholars interested in the creation of the political past and how that past influences our political culture today."

—Melanie Gustafson, University of Vermont

Against Obscenity

Reform and the Politics of Womanhood in America,
1873–1935

Leigh Ann Wheeler

"Rather than portraying early twentieth-century debates over obscenity as a part of a continuous battle between the forces of 'repression' and 'enlightenment,' Leigh Ann Wheeler identifies key moments in these early sex wars, skillfully elucidating the changing significance of gender."

LABOR

Studies in Working-Class History of the Americas

The mission of Labor

While still paying critical homage to the tradition from which the journal derives its energy, Labor expands the field's scope, giving equal attention to other critical labor systems (agricultural work, slavery, unpaid and domestic labor, the informal sector, the professions, etc.) and social contexts (race, gender, class, ethnicity, etc.). The journal's focus, beginning with U.S. experience, extends to developments across the "American" hemisphere and incorporates transnational comparisons that shed light on the American experience.

Don't miss this special issue

"Class Analysis in Early America and the Atlantic World: Foundations and Futures" offers a reevaluation of the potential and future of class analysis in scholarly work, particularly as it relates to increasing the understanding of the popular struggle in the early modern Atlantic world, a struggle that lies at the heart of many of today's class-related dilemmas.

The image shows the cover of the journal 'LABOR: Studies in Working-Class History of the Americas'. The cover is dark with the title 'LABOR' in large, white, bold letters at the top. Below the title, the subtitle 'Studies in Working-Class History of the Americas' is written in a smaller font. There are several article titles listed on the cover, including 'Making Sense of White Slavery and Whiteness', 'Not Real Immigrants: Mexican Workers and the National Origins Act', 'Labor's Wartime Housewife and the Politics of the Cost of Living', and 'Bitterweet News in Hershey, Pennsylvania'. The cover also indicates the volume and issue information: 'Volume 14 Number 1 Summer 2011'.
