

News and Notes

Activities

Edward G. Carmines, Indiana University, and James A. Stimson, Florida State University, received the Chastain Award for the best paper given at the 1977 Annual Meeting of the Southern Political Science Association. The title of their paper is, "The Continuing Issue in American Politics." They have also been awarded a research grant from the National Science Foundation for their project, "The Emergence and Development of Political Issues." The grant is for $98,959 for a two-year period beginning September, 1979.

Robert M. Cutler, graduate student at the University of Michigan, will be Albert Gallatin Fellow in International Affairs, Graduate Institute of International Studies, University of Geneva, during the year 1979-1980, and will conduct dissertation research there concerning Soviet policies toward the integration of the European peripheries into the European communities.

Karl Deutsch, Harvard University and the Berlin Institute of Comparative Social Research, has been awarded the "In Media Res" communications award. The award of $11,000, established by Dr. Hubert Burda, is presented by the Bad Godesberg (Germany) Assembly. Deutsch is the third winner of the award, which is presented every five years to recognize achievement in the field of communication research.

Robin Dorff, Michigan State University, received a $5,000 All-University Research Initiation Grant for a study in Political Decision Making in Face-to-Face Groups, Winter-Spring, 1979.

Heinz Eulau, Stanford University. Eleven universities in four central European countries were the sites of a three-week lecture tour arranged in late November and early December by the United States International Communication Agency for Heinz Eulau, William Bennett Munro Professor of Political Science and Senior Fellow at the Hoover Institution of Stanford University. Eulau spoke to undergraduate and graduate student audiences at the universities of Vienna and Graz in Austria; Heidelberg, Mannheim, Hamburg and Kiel in Germany; Aarhus in Denmark; and Basel, St. Gallen, Zurich and Bern in Switzerland. His topics concerned the complexities of electoral and legislative processes in the United States. Eulau also participated in a two-day research seminar on comparative politics arranged by the University of Innsbruck, Austria, and he consulted with the staff of ZUMA, Germany's respected Center for Public Opinion Polls, Methods and Analyses. Eulau, on sabbatical leave from Stanford University, currently holds a John Simon Guggenheim Foundation fellowship.

James Fenske, Michigan State University, was awarded a Presidential Management Internship position. He was a March, 1979 graduate of the Master of Public Administration Program.

Ada Finifter, Michigan State University, received a travel grant of $1,000 from the MSU Special Travel Fund to attend the 11th World Congress of the International Political Science Association in Moscow, USSR, August 12-18, 1979.

Ada Finifter and Bernard Finifter, Michigan State University, co-principal investigators, were recipients of $129,231 from the Russell Sage Foundation for analysis of data on American migrants in Australia and for a comparative replication survey on American non-migrant resident population. The grant is entitled, "Citizen Integration, Expectations, and National Commitment: A Study of American Emigrants, Expatriates, and Residents."

Charles R. Foster, Committee on Atlantic Studies, was elected vice-chairman of the IPSA Research Committee on Political Education while attending the Committee's session at the August IPSA Congress in Moscow. In early October he spoke on Political Culture and Political Education at the International Seminar on Political Education in Salzburg, Austria, October 8-12. October 13 he gave a talk on bilingual education for German guest workers at the Frankfurt International Book Fair.

Joseph Hajda, Kansas State University, participated in the international symposium on the impact of modern agriculture on rural transformation in Szegeed, Hungary, September 3-7, 1979. He presented a paper entitled, "Rural Transformation and Public Policy."

John H. Herz, The City University of New York, received a grant from the Volkswagen Foundation to organize two conferences at the Center for European Studies, CUNY, on a comparison of successor democracies reacting to antecedent totalitarian regimes.

Chun-tu Hsueh, University of Maryland, presented a paper on modernization and revolution in China at an international seminar in Hong Kong last December. His book, Huang Hsing and the Chinese Revolution (Stanford University Press) has recently been translated and published by the People's Publishing House of Hunan, with an overseas edition by the Hong Kong Branch of the Joint Publishing Company of Peking.

Earl R. Kruschke, professor of political science at the California State University, Chico, has received that university's Outstanding Teaching Award for 1979. The award carries with it a $1,000 prize.

Kenneth P. Langton, associate professor, University of Michigan, participated in the 17th Inter-American Congress of Psychology, July 1-6, 1979, in Lima, Peru.

Charles Lipson, assistant professor of political science at the University of Chicago, has been awarded a Rockefeller Foundation fellowship in international relations. He is researching the politics of trade protection while a Visiting Scholar at the Harvard Center for International Affairs.

Thomas Patrick Melady, President of Sacred Heart University (Bridgeport, Connecticut) and professor of political science there, was elected Chairman by the 19 presidents of the independent institutions of higher learning of the Connecticut Conference of Independent Colleges. He was also elected Vice Chairman of the International League for Human Rights. His last three books, Burundi: The Tragic Years, Uganda: The Asian Exiles and Idi Amin Dada: Hitler in Africa, have been devoted to human rights problems.

Ellen Mickiewicz, Michigan State University, received a grant of $25,000 for 1979-80 from the Ford Foundation for completion of a manuscript, "Media and the Russian Public."

William Morrow, College of William and Mary, will be on leave in the Spring term, 1980, in order to conduct research in Washington, D.C.

Gerard F. Rutan of Western Washington University has been elected national president of the Association for Canadian Studies in the United States (ACSUS) for a two-year term of office. He began his term at the fifth Biennial ACSUS Conference in Washington, D.C., September 27-30, 1979.

J. David Singer traveled to the Far East this past summer lecturing on regional and global security matters as well as on his research into the correlates of international war. Following the International Political Science Association Congress in Moscow (August 12-18) and meetings of the Peace Research Association and the Peace Science Society in Germany, he then lectured at research institutes in Finland and Sweden. More recently (November 1-4), as co-chairperson of the Diplomatic History-World Politics network, he participated in the Cambridge meeting of the Social Science History Association.

Roger Smith, College of William and Mary, will be on leave in the Spring term, 1980, in order to conduct research in Washington, D.C.

David Stern has a Faculty Research Fellowship and is on leave from the Political Science Department of Colgate University for the current academic year.

Clarence N. Stone has received an award from the National Endowment for the Humanities for a seminar for the non-teaching professions. The seminar, "Bureaucracy, Professionalism, and Creativity," will be offered in the summer of 1980 for practitioners in the field of public administration.

Frank Wayman, University of Michigan-Dearborn, has spent his sabbatical in Washington, D.C., studying Congressional action on energy legislation.

New Appointments

Juan del Aguila, assistant professor, Emory University.

Patricia M. Alt, assistant professor, University of Baltimore.

Q. Whitfield Ayres, assistant professor, University of South Carolina.

Walter F. Baber, assistant professor, Illinois State University.

William D. Berry, assistant professor, Department of Political Science, University of Kentucky.

Leonard Champney, assistant professor, University of Scranton.

Bobby L. Childress, assistant professor, Queens College.

Susan E. Clark, assistant professor, LBJ School, Northwestern University.

Kenneth M. Coleman, associate professor, Department of Political Science, University of Kentucky, is currently serving as Acting Director of the University of Kentucky Center for Developmental Change.

Edward W. Crowe, assistant secretary to the University of North Carolina.

William E. Denton, Social Science Research Associate, LBJ School of Public Affairs, University of Texas.

Nelson C. Dometrius, assistant professor, Texas Tech University.

Charles F. Doran, professor, The Johns Hopkins University, School of Advanced International Studies, Washington, D.C.; formerly professor, Rice University.

William H. Dutton, associate professor, The Annenberg School of Communications, University of Southern California; formerly of San Diego State University.

Tawfic E. Farah, President of the Middle East Research Group, Inc. and Editor, Journal of Arab Affairs; formerly of Kuwait University.

Alan C. J. Feng, Chairman of Political Science Department, has recently been appointed as the Distinguished Teaching Chair and the Commonwealth Teaching Fellow of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Professor Feng has been the Chairman of the Political Science Department at Cheyney State College since 1975.

Beth C. Fuchs, lecturer, Duke University.

Allen Hays, assistant professor, University of Northern Iowa.

Lenneal Henderson, associate professor, School of Business and Public Administration, Howard University; formerly, Department of Political Science, Howard University.

John F. Hoadley, assistant professor, Duke University.

R. Robert Huckfeldt, assistant professor, Louisiana State University; formerly of University of Notre Dame.

Charlie Jones, professor, Bethune-Cookman College.

C. Scott Keeter, assistant professor, Rutgers University.

Arlon K. Kemple, assistant professor, University of Alabama.

Volkmar Lauber, assistant professor, Johns Hopkins University, The Bologna Center.

Frederick P. Lee, assistant professor, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Mary M. Lepper, associate professor, The Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, Syracuse University.

David L. Lowery, assistant professor, Department of Political Science, University of Kentucky.

Vincent Mahler, assistant professor, Department of Political Science, Loyola University of Chicago.

Timothy D. Mead, associate professor of political science and coordinator of the Master of Urban Administration program at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte; formerly fellow in public management, the Academy for Contemporary Problems, Washington, D.C.

Helen E. Purkitt, assistant professor, U.S. Naval Academy; formerly of Texas Tech.

Louis Quiros, senior research fellow, Institute for Applied Social and Economic Research, New Guinea.

Richard B. Riley, assistant professor, Department of Political Science, Baylor University; formerly at the College of Saint Rose.

Lars G. Schoultz, associate professor, University of North Carolina.

Frank Schwartz, assistant professor, Georgia College.

Thomas Sedwick, assistant professor, University of Scranton; formerly at Hartwick College.

Lee Sigelman, associate professor, Department of Political Science, University of Kentucky.

David M. Speak, assistant professor, Augusta College.

Deborah L. Toler, instructor, Ohio State University.

Ronald E. Weber, professor, Louisiana State University; formerly of University of Indiana.

Maurice C. Woodard, professor, School of Business and Public Administration, Howard University; formerly, Department of Political Science, Howard University.

Harry Wray, assistant professor, DePaul University, Chicago, Illinois.

Jean Yarbrough, assistant professor, Department of Political Science, Loyola University of Chicago.

Visiting and Temporary Appointments

Darryl Baskin, visiting associate professor, College of William and Mary during the 1979-80 academic year; formerly of Windham College.

Jeffrey Cohen, University of Michigan, visiting instructor in political science at Colgate University for the 1979-1980 academic year.

J. David Gopoiian, visiting assistant professor, Department of Political Science, University of Kentucky, for the 1979-80 academic year.

William C. Green, visiting assistant professor, Department of Political Science, University of Kentucky, for the 1979-80 academic year.

Shanto Iyengar, Kansas State University, visiting fellow, Psychology and Politics Program, Yale University.

Cynthia S. Kaplan, visiting lecturer, Department of Political Science, University of Michigan as well as in the Center for Russian and East European Studies for Fall 1979. Her permanent appointment is as instructor, Kalamazoo College, Kalamazoo, Michigan.

Vincent B. Khapoya, visiting professor, Graduate School of International Studies, University of Denver, for the winter and spring quarters, 1980; on leave from Oakland University (Michigan).

Frederick A. Lazin, Ben Gurion University of Beersheva, Israel, is a visiting scholar at the School of Architecture and Urban Studies at the University of California, Los Angeles, for 1979-80 academic year.

Helen Hill Miller, former editorial representative for the London Economist, will be a visiting professor at the College of William and Mary during the Spring term, 1980.

Craig N. Murphy, visiting instructor, Johns Hopkins University.

Michael Parenti, visiting fellow, Institute for Policy Studies, Washington, D.C., and adjunct professor of government, School of Government and Public Administration, American University.

Paige Alan Parker, visiting instructor, Department of Political Science, University of Kentucky, for the 1979-80 academic year.

Linda Richter, temporary instructor, Kansas State University.

Vera Shapiro, visiting instructor in public administration and American politics, University of Missouri-St. Louis, 1979-80.

Doh C. Shin, visiting fellow, Institution for Social and Policy Studies at Yale University, 1979-80.

John Shoemaker, temporary instructor, Kansas State University; formerly of Southwestern College, Winfield, Kansas.

Hedvah L. Schuchman, research associate professor, Center for Science and Technology Policy, Graduate School of Public Administration, New York University, for 1979-80; also serving as manager, Science Policy Studies at The Futures Group, Glastonbury, Connecticut.

Charles H. Williams, visiting assistant professor, University of Illinois-Chicago Circle.

Edward Woodhouse, visiting assistant professor, College of William and Mary during the Spring term, 1980; formerly of Southern Methodist University.

Fred W. Zuercher, professor, University of South Dakota, is serving on leave as secretary of public safety for the State of South Dakota.

Administrative Appointments

G. Pope Atkins, chairman, Political Science Department, U.S. Naval Academy.

Louis Cantori, chair, political science, University of Maryland, Baltimore County.

James O. Carroll, director, Advanced Study Program, Brookings Institution; formerly of Syracuse University.

D. S. Chauhan, director of the program in public administration at Bowling Green State University; formerly director of the public administration program at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville.

Robert H. Johnson, chairman, Department of Political Science, Colgate University.

Michael E. Kraft, chairman, Department of Political Science, University of Wisconsin, Green Bay.

Henry Krisch, associate professor, political science, is the new director, Center for Slavic and East European Studies, University of Connecticut, Storrs.

George LaNoue, director, Policy Sciences Graduate Program, University of Maryland, Baltimore County.

Lawrence D. Mankin, assistant dean, Graduate College at Arizona State University.

Theodore Marmor, chairman, Center for Health Studies, Yale University; also professor of public health and political science.

Louis H. Masotti, director of Public Management Program at Northwestern University; former professor of urban affairs and political science, Northwestern University.

A. Richard Norton, adjunct assistant professor, Department of Political Science, Old Dominion University.

William H. Overholt, formerly director of Hudson Research Services, Croton-on-Hudson, New York, will become vice president and senior political analyst at Bankers Trust Co., New York City. He will continue as editor of Global Political Assessment, published by Columbia University.

William L. Richter, director, Kansas State University South Asia Center.

Paul Saenz, Tucson, Arizona, Associate Deputy Commissioner for Policy Planning, Evaluation and Budget of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), U.S. Department of Justice.

John C. Wahlke, head, Department of Political Science, University of Arizona; formerly of the University of Iowa.

Ronald E. Weber, director, Institute of Government Research, Louisiana State University.

Promotions

Kristi Andersen, associate professor, Ohio State University.

E. Ramon Arango, professor, Louisiana State University.

Michael Cohen, associate professor, University of Michigan, promoted to associate research scientist in the Institute of Public Policy Studies, University of Michigan.

Granville J. Foster, professor, Columbus College.

Vagn K. Hansen, professor, Delta State University.

Tae-Hwan Kwak, professor, Department of Political Science, Eastern Kentucky University.

David M. Lampton, associate professor, Ohio State University.

John Foster Leich, professor, Louisiana Tech University.

Orma Linford, associate professor, Kansas State University.

Nicholas Miller, associate professor, University of Maryland, Baltimore County.

Karen A. Mingst, associate professor with tenure, Department of Political Science, University of Kentucky.

Edward N. Muller, full professor, University of Arizona.

Steven R. Schlesinger, associate professor, Catholic University of America.

Mitchell A. Seligson, associate professor, University of Arizona.

Elliot Tenofsky, associate professor and chairperson, Department of Political Science, Linfield College.

Janet Thomason, assistant professor, Ohio State University.

Retirements

Ivo D. Duchacek, professor of political science, The City College of New York, and former Executive Officer of the Ph.D. Program in Political Science, CUNY, has retired and was appointed Professor Emeritus at The City College.

Corrections

PS wishes to note the following corrections:

John M. Mendeloff, formerly of the University of California, Berkeley, School of Public Policy, is now assistant professor of political science at the University of California, San Diego. PS regrets it failed to list his new institutional affiliation in the Fall PS.

Leo Y. Liu, the new Chairman of the Department of Political Science at Brandon University, was incorrectly listed as Leo Y. Lui in the Summer PS. PS regrets the error.

Dr. Robert R. Thompson's dissertation, "The Political Socialization of American Children," was incorrectly listed in the Fall PS under the dissertations-in-preparation section, U.S. Political Institutions, Processes and Behavior. It should have been listed under the same section in the dissertations completed list. PS regrets the error.

Dr. Lenore G. Martin's dissertation title was incorrectly listed in the Fall PS, page 568. The correct title is "A Systematic Study of Boundary Disputes." PS regrets the error.

The call for papers for the 1980 New Jersey Political Science Association printed in the Fall PS incorrectly listed the address of Susan Lederman, to whom individuals should write if interested in giving papers, as Keane State College, Union City, New Jersey 07087. The correct address should have been Keane State College, Union, New Jersey 07083. PS regrets the error.

Maria J. Falco was incorrectly listed as the new Dean at Loyola College in New Orleans, Louisiana, in the Fall PS. Dr. Falco, formerly of Tulsa University, should have been listed as the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Loyola University, New Orleans, Louisiana. PS regrets the error.

In Memoriam

Carl Beck

On October 24, 1979, at the age of 49, Carl Beck's valiant struggle to live and work in the face of the pernicious effects of lung cancer ended. For his family, friends, colleagues and students, his death is a grievous loss. For his professional peers a review of his life should inspire us to be visionary in scholarship, as generous with time and ideas, and as catalytic to the work of others as he was.

Carl Beck's career spanned so many areas, his capacities and energies were so immense, that a brief review can do justice only to Carl's high regard for personal modesty. As a scholar, Carl was a pioneer. He strove to lift the study of elites in communist countries, in particular Eastern Europe, out of the realm of vignettes and impressions and into the world of empirically-based generalizations and comparisons. In 1968, Carl established the Archive on Political Elites in East Europe, a computerized multiple-access and retrieval system of collecting, organizing and most important, utilizing data on East European elites. The creation and availability of this archive made possible a variety of studies by Carl and others on the characteristics, careers, patterns, types and changes of elites in Eastern Europe. It also permitted new dimensions to be added to the study of the institutions and processes of these often opaque political systems. He believed that work of this type not only could be done, but that it was necessary in order to improve our understanding of states too often homogenized in frozen images or dismissed as mere minics of the Soviet model. In this area, as in all subjects he approached, Carl was inspired by the challenges rather than cowed by the obstacles.

Carl not only sought understanding as a scholar, but also invested enormous efforts into making information available to other scholars. In his published works, as in his teaching and administrative enterprises, he promoted both the development of substantive research and the diffusion of scientific information. Thus his work on East European elites produced, in addition to the Archive, a computerized bibliography on elites (with J. Thomas McKechnie, 1968), and many derivative analyses resulting in numerous articles and culminating in Beck et al., Comparative Communist Political Leadership (1972). His analytical work, however, was not confined to the composition and career paths of elites, as both his perceptive essays on particular systems and those emphasizing conceptual tools for the comparative analysis of communist systems attest.

Carl's contributions to the spread of usable social science information were enormous and went well beyond the archiving and updating of data which he had initially gathered. In 1975, he published the Political Science Thesaurus under the auspices of the American Political Science Association. The Thesaurus was published as a preliminary list of related terms to guide information retrieval and, thus, to enable scholars and students to have access to information concerning the availability and location of research on topics of interest to them. An expanded and updated edition of the Thesaurus was released for publication just at the time of his death. Also, in 1975, United States Political Science Documents emerged under Carl's editorship. A multiple-access index to articles from over 150 social science journals, the four volumes of USPSD published to date provided harried teachers and researchers with the most