Radical Economics

Edited by Bruce Roberts, College of William and Mary and Susan Feiner, Hampton University

1992 Cloth 272 pages ISBN 0-7923-9178-0 $57.50

Contributors: S. Resnick, R. Wolff, H. J. Sherman, M. Itoh, A. Shaikh, E.K. Hunt, H. Gintis, J. Matthaei, J. Humphries, B. Norton, D. P. Levine, D. F. Ruccio, A. Brewer

Radical Economics does more to address current issues of debate in the field of radical economics than any other book. The topics selected for the six chapters focus on problems which are particularly crucial to the internal dynamism of the field and each chapter explicitly pairs essayists and commentators with different viewpoints to best illustrate the diversity within the radical approach. Topics considered include: the unifying features of radical economics, questions of methodological consensus, the debate between Marxian and non-Marxian radical traditions, and the "mathematization" of radical theory.

Post-Popperian Methodology of Economics Recovering Practice

Edited by Neil de Marchi, Duke University

1992 Cloth 384 pages ISBN 0-7923-9241-8 $77.50

For much of the last three decades or more, economic methodology has been dominated by the work of Karl Popper, who held that science is what it is by virtue of adhering to certain ideals. The methodology of science is therefore not empirical or descriptive, but rather a set of rules for producing "rational" or "objective" knowledge. This volume presents alternatives to exclusively Popperian methodology. The purpose of this collection is not to reject Popper, but to show there are other ways of construing methodology.

This book is divided into three parts. Part I contains two critical surveys -- one dealing with the rule-based tradition which has had a great influence on economic methodology in the last three decades and the other arguing for the social conditioning of knowledge. Part II is concerned with auxiliary hypotheses needed to link rational choice at the social and individual levels. Part III follows up on aspects raised in linking rational choice at the social and individual levels by looking at specific issues including rhetoric and economics and gender and economic research.
