The Price of Progress in a Japanese Village, 1951–1975

Robert J. Smith. Returning in 1975 to a remote village he had first studied in 1951, the author found the quality of life there drastically altered, not only by the advent of television and modern gadgets but by the decline of the religious observances, social customs, and family relationships that had once given the village a strong sense of community. Through accounts of the histories of several families, as well as a close look at virtually all aspects of village life, the author explores the circumstances that led to these far-reaching changes. $15.00

Women in Russia

Edited by Dorothy Atkinson, Alexander Dallin & Gail Warshofsky Lapidus. Eighteen historians and social scientists discuss various aspects of Russian women's lives from earliest times to the present, with an emphasis on their problems and opportunities in the Soviet Union today. Topics include the current status of women in industry, agriculture, and the professions; the issues of equal pay for equal work; marriage law and the family; sex stereotypes in children's textbooks; social services; and political participation. $18.75

Famine in Tudor and Stuart England

Andrew B. Appleby. Challenging the widely held belief that early modern England was spared subsistence crises, this study shows that the northwestern English counties of Cumberland and Westmorland suffered severe famines in 1587, 1597, and 1623. Through a systematic analysis, the author shows that the deaths were not caused by epidemic diseases, as most historians have maintained, but by starvation. $14.50

Victorian Imperialism

C.C. Eldridge

The British Empire during the reign of Queen Victoria has been the subject of much recent controversy. Dr. Eldridge summarises the latest findings and presents a balanced picture of the reasons that lay behind the acquisition of colonies in many parts of the world at different times. Contrasting views, that the empire was a necessity to Britain or that the colonies were, in Disraeli's famous phrase 'a millstone round our necks', are compared, and the economic, political, social and 'emotional' factors behind colonisation are analysed and assessed.

The Emergence of the Labour Party 1880-1924

Roger Moore

The foundation of the Labour Party and its success in replacing the Liberals as the main alternative to Conservatism form the substance of the author's account of a vitally important period in modern history. Without over simplification, he describes the precise contribution of Socialist enthusiasts, middle-class intellectuals, and trade unionists to bringing the Labour Party to power. This book makes possible a clearer understanding of the Labour Party's traditions, strengths and problems in an age of political upheaval.

THE ITALIAN NATIONALIST ASSOCIATION AND THE RISE OF FASCISM IN ITALY

By Alexander J. De Grand

After Mussolini himself, the Italian Nationalist Association made the single most important contribution to the construction of the Fascist system. Like the Action Française, but far more successfully, the Italian Nationalists broke with liberal parliamentary democracy to develop an aggressive response to the challenge presented by the working class and the Socialist party. Professor De Grand's study is the first full-length treatment in English of the Italian Nationalist Association and the first to make use of the Federzoni family papers.

THE POLITICS OF ANTIPOLITICS

The Military in Latin America

Edited by Brian Loveman and Thomas M. Davies, Jr.

Bringing together readings on the military in Latin America from diverse Latin American and United States sources, this anthology focuses on what the editors term "antipolitics"—the rejection by the military of "politics" with its conflicts among personalist factions or political parties as justification for the establishment of long-term military rule. Selections ranging from historical studies to case studies, official U.S. documents, and speeches by military caudillos illustrate the underlying similarities between Latin American military governments and trace those similarities back to the Hispanic military tradition.

a journal of the
Fernand Braudel
Center for the Study of Economies,
Historical Systems,
and Civilizations

Review is committed to the pursuit of a perspective which recognizes the primacy of analysis of economies over long historical time and large space, the holism of the socio-historical process, and the transitory (heuristic) nature of theories.

THEORY and SOCIETY

RENEWAL AND CRITIQUE IN SOCIAL THEORY

Editors: ALVIN W. GOULDNER, Editor-in-Chief, St. Louis.
ERVING GOFFMAN, Philadelphia, DEREK PHILLIPS, Amsterdam.
PAUL WALTON, London. ROD AYA, Amsterdam.

Special Advisory Editor: ROBERT MERTON, New York.

As it enters its fifth year of publication, THEORY and SOCIETY is expanding from a quarterly to a bi-monthly publication. At the same time, it is broadening its focus to include more work centered on an historically informed understanding of everyday life. The central concern of the journal remains, as before, social theory developed by rigorous scholarship and research. In addition, attention will be directed toward two subsidiary concerns, (1) the interface between theory and politics and (2) cultural criticism. THEORY and SOCIETY is of particular interest to, and a voice for, those new types of social scientists who are moving beyond sterile specializations and narrow "professionalism" toward wider syntheses.

RESEARCH IN ECONOMIC ANTHROPOLOGY

An Annual Compilation of Research

Series Editor: George Dalton, Department of Economics and Anthropology, Northwestern University.

The essays in this annual series consist of original research done by an international community of anthropologists, economists, historians, and sociologists writing on pre-industrial economies and their modern transformation, particularly in the Third World of Africa, Asia, Latin America, the Caribbean, the Middle-East, and Oceania. The principal topics to be treated are the organization and performance of tribal and peasant economies under pre-colonial, colonial, and post-colonial conditions; also, related themes in economic anthropology and early economic history, such as external trade, tribute money, ceremonial exchange, alliance networks, technology, ecology, and the economic organization of traditional kingdom-states. Papers on topics in modern rural development, such as cooperatives, land reform, settlement schemes, and agricultural innovation, will also be included.

Comparative Studies in Society and History is a forum for presentation and discussion of new research into problems of change and stability that recur in human societies through time or in the contemporary world. It sets up a working alliance between specialists in all branches of the social sciences and humanities. Debate and review articles bring the general reader in touch with current findings and issues.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Contributions may be descriptive, analytical or theoretical. Any article not in itself comparative may be accepted if it lends itself to comment that will place it in comparative perspective. Correspondence with the editors prior to the submission of articles will help to enable them to obtain such comment or a companion study. Emphasis in comparative studies may be either on similarities or, if these are significant enough and call for some recasting of generalisations, on differences. All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to the Editors, Comparative Studies in Society and History, Department of History, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor Michigan 48109.

Two copies of each contribution, preferably accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope, should be submitted. Both text and footnotes should be clearly typed with double spacing and wide margins; footnotes should appear on separate pages at the end of the article. Illustrations may be included by arrangement with the editors.

Contributors will receive 50 offprints. Any additional offprints must be ordered on receipt of the first proof.

ISI Tear Service, 325 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19106, U.S.A. is authorized to supply copies of separate articles for private use only.

Claims for missing issues will be considered only if made immediately upon receipt of the subsequent issue.
