

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Ersel Aydinli is an Associate Professor of International Relations at Bilkent University. His research focuses on international relations theory, transnational security issues and non-state actorship. He is co-editor, with James N. Rosenau, of Paradigms in Transition: Globalization, Security and the Nation State (SUNY Press, 2005).

Alex J. Bellamy is Professor of International Relations at the University of Queensland, Australia. His most recent books include 'Understanding Peacekeeping' (with Paul D. Williams and Stuart Griffin), Just Wars: From Cicero to Iraq and Fighting Terror: Ethical Dilemmas. He is currently completing a book on the Responsibility to Protect. He has written over fifty articles on the ethics and laws of war, the UN, peace operations and humanitarian intervention in journals such as International Security and the Journal of Peace Research.

Corneliu Bjola is Assistant Professor of Political Science at McMaster University, Canada. His current research interests focus on the relationship between argumentation and ethics in world politics. His recent publications include articles in the European Journal of International Relations, Review of International Studies and Journal of Political Culture. He can be reached at <bjolacor@mcmaster.ca>.

Reed Davis is Professor and Chairman of the Department of Political Science and Geography at Seattle Pacific University. His book on Aron, Raymond Aron and the Politics of Reason, will be published by LSU Press in the autumn of 2008.

Raymond Duvall is Morse-Alumni Professor and Chair of the Department of Political Science at the University of Minnesota. His most recent writings have concerned power in international politics and global governance, and the forms and functions of critical international relations theory. He is particularly interested in the complex relations between sovereign power and productive/constitutive power in shaping contemporary world orders.

Dilek Elveren joined the Organisation Internationale de la Francophonie in December 2007 as a Program Specialist on Gender Equality, in Paris, France. From November 2004 to September 2006, she was consultant, at the Section for Gender Equality and Development, of the Social and Human Sciences Sector of UNESCO. She also worked on violence against women for Doctors of the World and the French Red Cross, in Haiti and Algeria, in 2006 and 2007. Born in Brussels, she received her higher education mainly in France, and in Turkey. She has obtained a Master's degree in Political Sciences and International Relations from Sorbonne University in Paris. She has also studied Law and Sociology. Her areas of research are gender issues, diplomatic dynamics within IGOs, multilateralism, socio-political development and political processes in conflict and post-conflict areas.

Jonathan Havercroft (Ph.D University of Minnesota 2006) is a Security and Defence Forum Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the University of British Columbia's Centre of International Relations. In addition to space weapons, his research interests include struggles over the recognition of indigenous rights under international law, and the history of changes in norms of state sovereignty.

Carl Knight is a Research Fellow in the Adam Smith Research Foundation and the Department of Politics, University of Glasgow. His research interests are in political theory and ethics, and he has published articles on distributive justice, responsibility, multiculturalism, and moral epistemology. His forthcoming publications include Luck Egalitarianism (Edinburgh University Press) and Distributive Justice and Responsibility (edited with Zofia Stemplowska, Oxford University Press).

Halvard Leira is a Research Fellow at the Norwegian Institute of International Affairs (NUPI). His research interests include international political thought, the role and spread of knowledge and ideas in international relations, disciplinary history and diplomacy. He has published extensively in Norwegian, most notably he co-wrote (with Iver B. Neumann) the centenary history of the Norwegian foreign service, and in the Leiden Journal of International Law, The Hague Journal of Diplomacy and International Studies Perspectives. He is a keen supporter of the 17th century.

Julie Mathews is an Assistant Professor of second language education at Bilkent University. Her research focuses on sociocultural factors affecting second language academic literacy, particularly in the discipline of International Relations.

Valentine M. Moghadam joined Purdue University in January 2007 as Professor of Sociology and Women's Studies, and Director of the Women's Studies Program. Between May 2004–December 2006 she was Chief of the Section for Gender Equality and Development of the Social and Human Sciences Sector of UNESCO, in Paris, France. She received her higher education in Canada and the US. After obtaining her Ph.D in sociology from the American University in Washington, DC in 1986, she taught the sociology of development and women in development at New York University. From 1990 through 1995 she was Senior Researcher and Coordinator of the Research Program on Women and Development at the WIDER Institute of the United Nations University (UNU/WIDER), and was based in Helsinki, Finland. She was a member of the UNU delegation to the World Summit on Social Development (Copenhagen, March 1995), and the Fourth World Conference on Women (in Beijing in September 1995). Dr. Moghadam is author of three single-authored books and seven edited books. Her areas of research are globalisation, transnational feminist networks, civil society and citizenship, and women's employment in the Middle East. She has lectured and published widely and consulted many international organisations.

Paul Roe is Associate Professor in the Department of International Relations and European Studies at Central European University, Budapest. He is the author of Ethnic Violence and the Societal Security Dilemma (2005).

John Williams is Senior Lecturer in International Relations in the School of Government and International Affairs, Durham University. His recent works include The Ethics of Territorial Borders: Drawing Lines in the Shifting Sands (Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2006) and, co-edited with Richard Little, The Anarchical Society in a Globalized World (Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2006).

