Journal of the Society for American Music

Journal of the Society for American Music (JSAM) is an international, peer-reviewed journal that explores all aspects of American music and music in the Americas. JSAM is dedicated to supporting scholarship that transcends disciplinary boundaries, cutting across historical musicology, music theory, ethnomusicology, cultural theory, and American studies. JSAM encourages international dialogue across disciplines. The journal features articles, reviews of books, recordings, and multimedia items, and explorations of special topics.

Christina Baade is Associate Professor of Communication Studies at McMaster University. Her publications include the monograph “Victory Through Harmony”: The BBC and Popular Music in World War II (Oxford University Press); chapters in Big Ears: Listening for Gender in Jazz Studies, and Floodgates: Technologies, Cultural Exchange and the Persistence of Place; and articles in Popular Music, Journal of Popular Music Studies, Atlantis: A Women’s Studies Journal, and Feminist Media Studies.

Jonathan W. Bernard is Professor of Music Theory at the School of Music, University of Washington. He has written on Varèse, Bartók, Carter, Messiaen, Ligeti, Zappa, Feldman, minimalism, the history of theory, and the history of twentieth-century compositional practice for numerous scholarly journals and presses. His most recent article, “From Lumpy Gravy to Civilization Phaze III: The Story of Frank Zappa’s Disenchantment,” appeared in this journal, Vol. 5/1 (February 2011).

Christopher Bruhn is Assistant Professor of Music History at Denison University. His current research projects center on the relationship between music and the philosophy of William James. His work has appeared in American Music, Journal of Musicology, and in the collections European Music and Musicians in New York City, 1840–1900, edited by John Graziano, and Music, American Made: Essays in Honor of John Graziano, edited by John Koegel.

Ross Cole graduated from Christ Church, Oxford in 2009 and received a Gibbs prize for the highest overall mark in music. In 2010, he was awarded an M.Res. from the University of York, after studying with William Brooks. He is currently at King’s College, Cambridge working on an AHRC-funded Ph.D. in Historical Musicology, supervised by Nicholas Cook.

David Evans is Professor of Music at The University of Memphis. He has published widely on blues and related types of African American music and is editor of the “American Made Music” book series of the University Press of Mississippi.

Meghan Forsyth is a SSHRC Postdoctoral Research Fellow at Memorial University of Newfoundland. She holds a Ph.D. in ethnomusicology from the University of Toronto. Her current research explores issues of creativity, improvisation, and tourism in Acadian music and dance performance. In 2008 she received the Sir Ernest MacMillan Memorial Foundation Award for Research in Canadian Music.

Kevin Fullerton is a musicologist with a background in trombone performance. He is currently working toward his Ph.D. in musicology at the University of Kansas. He holds degrees from the University of South Dakota, the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, and Iowa State University. His research is primarily concerned with popular music in the U.S., specifically jazz and blues.

Victoria Lindsay Levine is an ethnomusicologist specializing in Native North American musical cultures. She serves as the Christine S. Johnson Professor of Music at Colorado College, where she has taught since 1988. She is the author, co-author, or editor of numerous publications, including Choctaw Music and Dance, with James H. Howard (University of Oklahoma Press, 1990), and Writing American Indian Music: Historic Transcriptions, Notations, and Arrangements, in the series Music of the United States of America (2002).

Beth E. Levy is Associate Professor of Music at the University of California, Davis. In addition to her recent book, Frontier Figures: American Music and the Mythology of the American West (2012), she has published in American Music, repercussions, and The Journal of Film Music, and her contribution to Aaron Copland and His World, edited by Carol J. Oja and Judith Tick, won the 2005 Irving Lowens Article Award.

Jim Lovensheimer is Associate Professor of Musicology at Vanderbilt University's Blair School of Music. He is the author of South Pacific: Paradise Rewritten (2010), and is currently preparing a study of Oscar Hammerstein II, both for Oxford University Press. At Vanderbilt, Lovensheimer recently spoke on musical theater for the prestigious Chancellor's Lecture series, and he has been awarded the Ellen Gregg Ingalls Award for excellence in undergraduate teaching as well as the Chancellor's Cup.

Keith Ward is Professor of Music and Director of the School of Music at the University of Puget Sound. He has been active throughout his career as both a performing artist and scholar of American piano music. His book, For the Parlor and the Concert Stage: A Guide to Recent Collections of American Piano Music from the Classic and Romantic Eras, is published by Pendragon Press.
