OXFORD JOURNALS

The Indian Journal of Social Science

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF: SUKHAMOY CHAKRAVARTY
Delhi School of Economics, Delhi

The problems of development and social change, the interface between science, society, culture and technology, and a comprehension of future patterns of development are only a few of the problems concerning social scientists today. With a view to disseminating analytical discussion and research findings on these themes and issues, the Indian Council of Social Science Research has launched The Indian Journal of Social Science.

The major purpose of the journal is to articulate rigorous scientific discussion on the diverse concerns of social science research – from comparative research, innovative approaches and the analysis and implications of accepted paradigms and their alternatives, to the understanding of the diverse and complex social and economic issues facing developing countries. Multi-disciplinary in approach, the journal will periodically undertake an appraisal of social science research and provide for a closer interaction between the social sciences and policy-making.

The Indian Journal of Social Science is published quarterly.

SOUTH ASIA JOURNAL

A Journal of the Indian Council for South Asian Cooperation

---

Editor-in-Chief: BIMAL PRASAD
Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi

South Asia Journal explores themes and issues of vital national and regional concern for South Asian countries. The time is ripe for the countries of South Asia (Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, the Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka) to harness the powerful impulses of mutual cooperation and understanding inherent in their geography, culture, economy and historical evolution to assert themselves in the constructive reshaping of regional prospects. The irrationality of conflicts and tensions has held an unduly long and debilitating sway over the affairs of the region.

South Asia Journal aims to generate serious debate through in-depth and objective analyses presented from various perspectives by scholars, intellectuals and policy-makers both from within and without the region. The major purpose of such debate is to enhance mutual understanding and appreciation of each others' potentialities and problems, so as to build a sound infrastructure for regional cooperation and harmony.

South Asia Journal is published quarterly in July, October, January and April.
