Journal of the Society for American Music

Journal of the Society for American Music (JSAM) is an international, peer-reviewed journal that explores all aspects of American music and music in the Americas. JSAM is dedicated to supporting scholarship that transcends disciplinary boundaries, cutting across historical musicology, music theory, ethnomusicology, cultural theory, and American studies. JSAM encourages international dialogue across disciplines. The journal features articles, reviews of books, recordings, and multimedia items, and explorations of special topics.

Contributors

Carrie Allen teaches Western classical and American music courses at the University of Houston–Downtown. Her research on black gospel music and other aspects of music in the United States has appeared in the Black Music Research Journal and the SAM Bulletin and will appear in forthcoming revisions of The New Grove Dictionary of American Music and the Encyclopedia of Southern Culture. Allen is an active Sacred Harp singer.

E. Douglas Bomberger is Professor of Musicology and Chair of Fine and Performing Arts at Elizabethtown College. He serves as treasurer of the Society for American Music and as nineteenth-century area editor for The New Grove Dictionary of American Music, second edition. He is the author of “A Tidal Wave of Encouragement”: American Composers’ Concerts in the Gilded Age (2002) and editor of Brainard’s Biographies of American Musicians (1999).

Tim Brooks has been writing about the history of the recording industry and other media in various journals for the last forty years. His most recent book, Lost Sounds: Blacks and the Birth of the Recording Industry, 1890–1919 (2004), received the Irving Lowens Award. He is a past president of the Association for Recorded Sound Collections. Many of his writings are available at www.timbrooks.net.

Adrian P. Childs is Associate Professor of Composition and Theory and Director of Graduate Studies at the University of Georgia’s Hugh Hodgson School of Music. His scholarship and reviews appear in the Journal of Music Theory, Music Theory Online, and Notes; his music can be heard on the ACA Digital label.

Jennifer DeLapp-Birkett is an independent musicologist in the Washington, D.C., area. Her publications, including a 2008 article in the Journal of Musicological Research, pertain to Aaron Copland and Cold War politics. She is presently writing a book on Aaron Copland and the Second Red Scare. Her interest in Shaker music dates from the early 1990s.

David García is Assistant Professor of Music at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The Association for Recorded Sound Collections awarded García’s Arsenio Rodríguez and the Transnational Flows of Latin Popular Music (Temple University Press, 2006) a Certificate of Merit in the category Best Research in Folk, Ethnic, or World Music in 2007. He is currently researching the intersections of African American and Afro-Latino music in the mid-twentieth century.

Sumanth Gopinath is Assistant Professor of Music Theory at the University of Minnesota. He is currently working on two book projects, one on the politics of race and ethnicity in the music of Steve Reich, and another on the global ringtone industry. He is also editing, with Jason Stanyek, a volume provisionally titled The Oxford Handbook of Mobile Music Studies.

Kevin Kelly's dissertation dealt with the songs of Ives, focusing on the theme of death and its connections with nineteenth-century culture. He supervises the Music Library at the Hugh Hodgson School of Music at the University of Georgia in Athens. He also teaches theory and a graduate seminar in American music. Outside the university he directs several choral ensembles and a recorder consort.

Nancy Yunhwa Rao is Associate Professor of Music Theory at Rutgers University. Her research includes twentieth-century music in the United States, women composers, early history of Chinatown opera theaters, and contemporary Chinese composers. Recent articles include "Ruth Crawford's Imprint on Contemporary Composition" (2007) and "The Color of Music Heritage: Chinese America in American Ultra-Modern Music" (2009). She is currently finishing a book on U.S. Chinatown opera theaters.

Gregory Reish is Associate Professor of Music History and Head of Core Music Studies in the Chicago College of Performing Arts at Roosevelt University. His broad research interests range from the music of Giacinto Scelsi to bluegrass and old-time country. As a singer and multi-instrumentalist he has performed across much of the United States and Japan and is currently writing a book on vernacular guitar styles in the early United States.
