

Corrigendum

The Social Construction of Retirement and Evolving Policy Discourse of Working Longer – CORRIGENDUM

PHILIP TAYLOR AND CATHERINE EARL

doi:10.1017/S0047279415000665, first published online by Cambridge University Press, 17 November 2015.

In the April 2016 issue of the Journal of Social Policy (vol 45, part 2 pp251-268), there was an article by Philip Taylor and Catherine Earl entitled ‘The Social Construction of Retirement and Evolving Policy Discourse of Working Longer’ which contains the following statement: “The case for early exit was argued, in part, on the back of efforts to re-distribute work to the young. Macnicol (2008) describes this as ‘misguided short-termism’ attempting to facilitate economic modernisation” (p251). This should have read “Macnicol (2008) describes as incorrect commentary that this was ‘misguided short-termism’ attempting to facilitate economic modernisation.” The authors acknowledge that the statement in their article was incorrect and apologise for this oversight.

Reference

Taylor, P. and Earl, C. (2016), The Social Construction of Retirement and Evolving Policy Discourse of Working Longer. Journal of Social Policy, 45, 2, 251–268.