Educational Reform with Television

The El Salvador Experience

John K. Mayo, Robert C. Hornik, & Emile G. McAnany.

Unlike other developing countries that tried to upgrade aspects of their educational systems with television, El Salvador conceived the medium as an integral component of national reform. This detailed report of the planning, development, and results of the instructional television experiment demonstrates how El Salvador achieved positive results where other countries failed, and includes an analysis of how the El Salvador experience can be applied to other developing countries. $11.50

The Drugging of the Americas

How Multinational Drug Companies Say One Thing About Their Products to Physicians in the United States and Another Thing to Physicians in Latin America

Milton Silverman

In the United States, drug companies promoting their products to physicians are required by law to limit their claims to what they can prove, and to make full disclosure of all known hazards. Dr. Silverman finds that many multinational drug companies are circumventing similar laws in Latin America in order to sell more of their products. He provides detailed comparisons of the promotion of 28 separate prescription drugs in the U.S. and Latin America.

Labor and the Ambivalent Revolutionaries

Mexico, 1911-1923

Ramón Eduardo Ruiz

Most studies treat the Mexican Revolution of 1911 from a political or ideological viewpoint. This one shows how it affected the working class by looking at what was done to help industrial labor to win improved wages and above all the right to form labor unions. $10.50

Squatters and Oligarchs

Authoritarian Rule and Policy Change in Peru

David Collier

"One of the very best studies of Peruvian politics." —Alfred Stepan, Yale University "A major contribution to the understanding of changing patterns of authoritarian rule in Latin America." —Guillermo O'Donnell, Centro de Estudios de Estado y Sociedad (Buenos Aires) $10.95

The Making of a Missile Crisis: October 1962

Herbert S. Dinerstein

From newspaper accounts of the day, notably those in the New York Times, Pravda, Noticias de Hoy, and other sources Dinerstein explores the formation and influence of the assumptions and perceptions held by American, Cuban, and Soviet leaders during the Cuban missile crisis. He studies the interaction of all three governments thus correcting the American bias of earlier appraisals. $14.95

Urban Latin America

The Political Condition from Above and Below

By Alejandro Portes and John Walton

Urban Latin America is an attempt to integrate research on Latin American social organization within a single theoretical framework: development as fundamentally a political problem. The authors have included material on both elites and marginal populations and on the three major areas of research—planning, demography, and economics—in order to formulate and address some of the key questions about the structure of urban politics in Latin America.

Deciphering the Maya Script

By David Humiston Kelley
Deciphering the Maya Script summarizes and evaluates the progress that has been made in studies of the hieroglyphs in Mayan codices and inscriptions. It shows the areas where most authorities agree, presenting the major arguments on both sides of disputed problems and explaining the deciphering methods that have produced acceptable results. The author also sets forth new approaches to studying the script, and he proposes decipherments that will be an important base for future discussion.

Under the Rainbow

Nature and Supernature among the Panare Indians

By Jean-Paul Dumont

This ethnographic study of the Panare Indians of Venezuela is the first extensive look at a tribe of this region of the Amazonia. It is an important book not only because it delves into the myth-filled Panare culture, but also because the author has used a modified version of the structural analysis of Claude Lévi-Strauss in examining the Panare.
