Wellcome Bibliography for the History of Medicine

As a result of changes within the Wellcome Library, the Wellcome bibliography for the history of medicine (formerly known as Current work in the history of medicine) has ceased to be produced from June 2004. Citations created for it will still be searchable as part of the catalogue of the Wellcome Library for the History and Understanding of Medicine (<http://catalogue.wellcome.ac.uk>). The Bibliography has served the international history of medicine community loyally for the past fifty years, but technology and events have now overtaken it.

Call for Papers

XIIth Colloquium Hippocraticum Leiden University, 24, 25 and 26 August 2005 'Medical Education'

Training of doctors, midwives, and other medical professionals and amateurs; teaching in theory and practice; the role of the oral and written tradition in medicine; the role of medicine in general education; the social status of teachers and pupils; the influence of ancient medicine in later medical education; such are only a few of the possible topics that come readily to the mind when one thinks of education in ancient medicine.

The XIIth Colloquium Hippocraticum will be dedicated to the theme of medical education in Antiquity and the way in which it contributed to the medical education in later periods. We invite proposals for papers but we are also looking for scholars willing to organize a panel about
