

Cecil L. Eubanks (left) and Ronald Weber, co-editors of the Journal of Politics.

SVEN E. OLSSON

Promotions

---

James H. Seroka, professor, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Sarah Slavin, associate professor, New York State University College at Buffalo.

Albert Wurth, assistant professor of government, Lehigh University.

Retirements

---

John H. Esterline, professor emeritus, California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, as of July 1987.

Visiting and Temporary Appointments

---

Anton Bebler, visiting professor of political science (fall 1987), Southern Illinois University at Carbondale; formerly of Kardelj University (Ljubljana, Yugoslavia).

Sandy Maisel, Colby College, is spending the 1987-88 academic year as visiting professor in the department of government at Harvard University.

Sven E. Olsson, of the Swedish Institute for Social Research at the University of Stockholm, has joined Mount Vernon College as a Fulbright Visiting Scholar for the 1987-88 academic year.

Evert Vedung, associate professor of political science, Uppsala University, will be a visiting professor at Kyung Hee University, Seoul, from March to June 1988.

Award Recipients

Dirksen Congressional Center

---

Now in its tenth year, the Dirksen Congressional Center's grants program helps scholars offset the costs of research about the nature of the U.S. Congress. Applications are accepted any time before June 15 of each year for the grants, which range from $20,000-$25,000.

In 1987, the following political science scholars won awards.

Stephen Hess, Senior Fellow, The Brookings Institution.

Michael E. Kraft, department of political science, University of Wisconsin-Green Bay.

William M. LeoGrande, school of government and public administration, The American University.

Richard A. Loverd, department of political science, Villanova University.

Susan L. Roberts, department of political science, Winthrop College.

David W. Rohde, department of political science, Michigan State University.

Barbara Sinclair, department of political science, University of California-Riverside.

Herbert Weisberg, department of political science, The Ohio State University.

Cheryl L. Wires, doctoral candidate, department of government, Harvard University.

Fulbright Scholar Program

The following individuals in political science were chosen to be Fulbright scholars for the 1987-88 academic year.

Paul R. Abramson, professor, Department of Political Science, Michigan State University; lecturing in political science, Hebrew University, Jerusalem, Israel; October 1987-July 1988.

Bruce Michael Bagley, associate professor, Latin American Studies Program, Johns Hopkins University, School of Advanced International Studies; lecturing on political process trends, Facultad Latinoamericana de Ciencias Sociales, Quito, Ecuador; July-August 1987.

James F. Barnes, associate professor, Department of Political Science, Ohio University; lecturing in comparative politics, State University of Haiti and the International University of Haiti, Port au Prince, Haiti; October 1987-February 1988.

James W. Bjorkman, Clinical Associate Professor, Department of Preventive Medicine, University of Wisconsin; Directorship of American Studies Research Center, Hyderabad, India; September 1987-September 1988.

Cole Blasier, professor, Department of Political Science, University of Pittsburgh; lecturing in political science, University of Buenos Aires, Buenos Aires, Argentina; May-June 1987.

Gloria Braxton, associate professor, Department of Political Science, Southern University; lecturing in political science, Cuttington University College, Suacoco, Liberia; July 1987-July 1988.

Henry L. Bretton, professor, Department of Political Science, State University of New York; lecturing on international relations and economics, Diplomatic Academy of Vienna, University of Vienna, Vienna, Austria; March-June 1988.

D. S. Chauhan, professor, Department of Political Science, Bowling Green State University; lecturing in public administration/public policy, Sri Lanka Institute of Development Administration, Colombo, Sri Lanka; September 1988-January 1989.

Forrest D. Colburn, assistant professor, Department of Politics, Princeton University; lecturing in political science, Addis Ababa University, Addis Ababa, Ethiopia; September 1987-January 1988.

Cornelius P. Cotter, professor, Department of Political Science, University of Wisconsin; lecturing in political science, University of Bologna, Bologna, Italy; September-June 1987.

Jane L. Curry, associate professor, Department of Political Science, Santa Clara University; lecturing in political science, Catholic University of Lublin, Lublin, Poland; January-June 1988.

John J. Damis, professor, Department of Political Science, Portland State University; lecturing on international relations, Mohamed V University, Rabat, Morocco; September 1987-March 1988.

Glen C. Dealy, professor, Department of Political Science, Oregon State University; research in political science, Santiago, Chile, and Caracas, Venezuela; June-December 1987.

Paul Winter Drake, professor, Department of Political Science, University of California; lecturing on U.S. relations with Latin America, Universidad Catolica de Valparaiso, Santiago, Chile; July-August 1987.

JANE LEFTWICH CURRY

Harvey B. Feigenbaum, assistant professor, Department of Political Science, George Washington University; research on nuclear power and the organization of politics, France, Federal Republic of Germany; January-July 1988.

Alfredo G. Gutierrez, partner, Bill Jamieson Company; lecturing in political science, Colegio de Mexico, Mexico City, Mexico; June-July 1987.

Michael Haas, professor, Department of Political Science, University of Hawaii at Manoa; research on regional cooperation in Asia and the Pacific, Institute of Southeast Asian Studies, Singapore; June-September 1987.

William K. Hall, chairperson, Department of Political Science, Bradley University; lecturing in political science, University of Tokyo, Tokyo, Japan; April 1988-January 1989.

Iliya F. Harik, professor, Department of Political Science, Indiana University; research on transformation and development strategies: privatization policies in Egypt and Tunisia, American Research Center in Egypt, Cairo, Egypt, and Centre d'Etudes et de Recherches Economiques et Sociales, Tunis, Tunisia; November 1987-May 1988.

Robert E. Harmel, associate professor, Department of Political Science, Texas A&M University; lecturing and research in political science, University of Bergen, Bergen, Norway; September 1987-June 1988.

Llewellyn D. Howell, professor, School of International Services, American University; lecturing in political science, National Institute of Public Administration, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia; July 1987-May 1988.

John K. Hudzik, professor, School of Criminal Justice, Michigan State University; lecturing and research on cost containment in major police establishments, Australian Institute of Criminology, Woden, Australia; March-May 1987.

Robert S. Jordan, Department of Political Science, University of New Orleans; lecturing on international security, University of Lancaster, Lancaster, United Kingdom; January-July 1988.

Robert A. Kagan, professor, Department of Political Science, University of California; research on the legal control in the ports of Rotterdam and Oakland (California), Netherlands; May-August 1988.

Richard C. Kearney, associate professor, Department of Government and International Studies, University of South Carolina; lecturing in public administration, University of Mauritius, Reduit, Mauritius; September 1987-July 1988.

David A. Kowalewski, assistant professor of political science, University of Texas; lecturing on comparative and international politics, University of the Philippines and University of San Jose-Recoletos, Cebu City, Philippines; June 1987-March 1988.

Henry Krisch, professor, Department of Political Science, University of Connecticut; research in political science, Free University of Berlin, Berlin, Federal Republic of Germany; February-July 1988.

Rene N. Lemarchand, professor, Department of Political Science, University of Florida; research in political science, University of Chad, N'djamena, Chad; University of Lagos, Lagos, Nigeria; July 1987-January 1988.

Howard H. Lentner, professor, Department of Political Science, Baruch College; lecturing in political science, Colegio de Mexico, Mexico City, Mexico; March-July 1988.

Gregory M. Luebbert, assistant professor, Department of Political Science, University of California; research on Europe between the wars: conditions of pluralist and corporatist democracy, fascism and traditional dictatorship, Italy, Sweden; July 1987-January 1988.

Scott P. Mainwaring, assistant professor, Department of Government and International Studies, University of Notre Dame; research on political parties and democratization in Brazil, Centro de Estudos de Cultura Contemporanea, Sao Paulo, Brazil; July 1988.

Jeffrey D. McCausland, Major, U.S. Army, Ansbach, West Germany; research in Western European politics, Foundation for Research and Politics, Ebenhausen, Federal Republic of Germany; September 1987-July 1988.

Cynthia McClintock, associate professor, Department of Political Science, George Washington University; lecturing and research on redemocratization in Peru and inter-American relations, Catholic University, Lima, Peru; August 1987-January 1988.

Michael A. Morris, professor, Department of Political Science, Clemson University; lecturing on comparative Anglo-American politics and third world politics, Hatfield Polytechnic, London, United Kingdom; September 1987-June 1988.

Shaheen Mozaffar, assistant professor, Department of Political Science, Bridgewater State College; lecturing in political science and public administration, Ogun

State University, Ago-Iwoye, Nigeria; October 1987-August 1988.

Jamal R. Nassar, associate professor, Department of Political Science, Illinois State University; lecturing in Middle East politics, Bir Zeit University, Ramallah, West Bank; September 1987-June 1988.

James A. Nathan, professor, Department of Political Science, University of Delaware; lecturing on U.S.-Australia relations: the maritime dimension, University of New South Wales, Kensington, and West Australian Institute of Technology, Bentley, Australia; February 1987-January 1988.

David M. O'Brien, associate professor, Woodrow Wilson School of Government and Foreign Affairs, University of Virginia; lecturing in constitutional law, Oxford University, Oxford, United Kingdom; September 1987-May 1988.

Marian L. Palley, professor, Department of Political Science, University of Delaware; research on women and politics, Ewha Woman's University, Seoul, Korea; May-July 1988.

Adalberto Jose Pinelo, professor, Department of Political Science, Northern Kentucky University; lecturing in political science and public administration; Lima, Peru; August-December 1987.

MARIAN LIEF PALLEY

George B. Rabinowitz, professor, Department of Political Science, University of North Carolina; research on electoral behavior, University of Trondheim, Trondheim, Norway; September 1987-June 1988.

Howard L. Reiter, associate professor, Department of Political Science, University of Connecticut; research on party decline in Western industrialized nations, Norway, Sweden, United Kingdom; October 1987-January 1988.

John D. Robertson, associate professor, Department of Political Science, Texas A&M University; lecturing in political science, University of Trier, Trier, Federal Republic of Germany; March 1988-February 1989.

David A. Rosenberg, professor, Department of Political Science, Middlebury College; research on dictatorship and democracy in the Philippines: from Marcos to Aquino, University of the Philippines, Dili-man, Quezon City, Philippines; January-March 1988.

Suzanne H. Rudolph, professor of political science and director, South Asian Language and Area Center, Department of Political Science, University of Chicago; research on the cultural and historical interpretation of the Amar Singh Diary, Jawaharlal Nehru Memorial Museum and Library, New Delhi, India; September 1987-May 1988.

Edward V. Schneider, associate professor, Department of Political Science, City College; research on party and constituency in the Icelandic Althing, University of Iceland, Reykjavik, Iceland, July 1987-June 1988.

Donald M. Seekins, country risk analyst, Business Environment Risk Information, S.A.; lecturing in political science, University of Ryukyus and Okinawa Kokusai University, Okinawa, Japan; April 1988-January 1989.

Martin M. Shapiro, professor, School of Law, University of California; lecturing in American law and politics, Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales, Paris, France; August 1987-August 1988.

James J. Sullivan, academic administrator, California Sea Grant College Program, University of California, La Jolla; research in public administration, Tokyo, Japan; September 1987-April 1988.

Marianna P. Sullivan, professor, Department of Political Science, Trenton State College; lecturing in political science, University of Frankfurt, Frankfurt, Federal Republic of Germany; September 1987-July 1988.

Philip D. Supina, assistant professor, Department of History and Political Science, Cameron University; lecturing in political science, Beijing Foreign Studies University, Beijing, People's Republic of China; September 1987-August 1988.

Chester N. Tate, professor, Department of Political Science, North Texas State University; research on the Philippines Supreme Court from Marcos to the future, Institute of Philippine Culture, Ateneo de Manila University, Manila, Philippines; August 1987-January 1988.

Irene Tinker, visiting professor, Department of International Development Programs, American University; lecturing in political science and public administration, Tribhuvan University, Kathmandu, Nepal; January-May 1988.

Jiri Valenta, professor, Graduate School of International Studies, University of Miami; lecturing on Soviet Foreign Policy, Colegio de Mexico, Mexico City, Mexico; June-July 1987.

Brian G. Weinstein, professor, Department of Political Science, Howard University; lecturing on language planning, Hebrew University, Jerusalem, Israel; October 1987-July 1988.

James Oliver Williams, professor, Department of Political Science, North Carolina State University; lecturing in public administration and political science, Chinese University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong; September 1987-July 1988.

M. Crawford Young, professor, Department of Political Science, University of Wisconsin; lecturing in political science; University of Dakar, Dakar, Senegal; September 1987-June 1988.

National Academy of Public Administration

---

Eighteen new members were elected to membership in the National Academy of Public Administration in October 1987. Following are political science practitioners and scholars.

Edie Goldenberg, professor of political science and public policy, and director, Institute of Public Studies, The University of Michigan.

Dale Rogers Marshall, acting president and dean of the college, Wellesley College.

Francis E. Rourke, professor, department of political science, Johns Hopkins Hospital.

William J. Siffin, professor of political science and public affairs, Indiana University at Bloomington.

Richard L. Thornburgh, director, Institute of Politics, John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University.

National Research Council

---

Thirty-eight minority scholars have been selected in 1987 by the National Research Council to receive year-long postdoctoral fellowships. Plans for the 1988 fellowship competition are now underway. Further information and applications are available from the Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20418.

The following political scientists were among the 1987 fellows.

Pedro Angel Caban, Fordham University; fellowship institution, Hunter College, CUNY.

Michael Warren Combs, Louisiana State U and A&M College; fellowship institution, University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

NATO Advanced Research Fellowships

---

The following political scientists have received NATO Advanced Research Fellowships for 1987-88.

Boleslaw A. Boczek, professor, department of political science, Kent State University, for research on the Baltic Sea: Strategic Implications for NATO.

Joseph C. Rallo, associate professor, department of political science, U.S. Air Force Academy, Colorado Springs, for research on the Technological Politics of Alliance Policy.

Southern Political Science Association

---

At its annual meeting in Charlotte, North Carolina, held November 5-7, 1987, the Southern Political Science Association presented three awards for outstanding papers delivered at the 1986 meeting.

The Brooks-Cole Award for the best paper by a graduate student was won by Joseph C. Clengermayer of Washington University in St. Louis for "Government-Sponsored Consumer Advocacy and the Cost of Capital: The Case of Electric Utility Rate Regulation."

Karen O'Connor of Emory University and Jeffrey Segal of the State University of New York at Stony Brook received the award for the best paper on women and politics for "The Burger Court and Sex Discrimination Litigation."

Two authors shared the Pi Sigma Alpha Award for the best paper presented at the 1986 meeting. The winners were Donald R. Songer for "Published and Unpublished Decisions of Lower Federal Courts: Similarities and Differences" and Paul Whiteley, University of Bristol and Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University for "Economic Determinants of American Voting Behavior."

Other Awards and Honors

---

John Amberger, executive director of the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, received the Distinguished Alumni Award from the Graduate Program in Public Administration, Wayne State University.

EDWARD WEISBAND

Lee Ann Banaczak, a graduate student at Washington University in St. Louis, received the Alice Paul Dissertation Award for her dissertation proposal, "A Comparative Analysis of Mobilization Outcomes: The Case of Women's Suffrage." The award amount is $250 and is given annually by the Women's Caucus for Political Science.

William James Booth, assistant professor of political science, Duke University, was selected as a 1987-88 Fellow at the National Humanities Center for his research project, "Masters and Servants: Reflections on Marxism and Its Origins." The Center also selected him as an Olin Fellow to be part of a seminar in political history.

Carl Q. Christol, University of Southern California, received the 1987 Book Award of the International Academy of Astronautics, Social Sciences Section, for his The Modern International Law of Outer Space at the annual meeting of the Academy in Brighton, England, in October.

James W. Clarke, professor of political science, University of Arizona, has received the Burlington Northern Foundation's 1987 Faculty Achievement Award at the University of Arizona for distinguished accomplishments as a teacher. The Award included a $2,500 stipend.

Jeanne Nienaber Clarke, associate professor of political science, University of Arizona, has received a $3,000 American Council of Learned Societies Grant-In-Aid for her research on the Department of Interior under Secretary Harold Ickes in the 1933-46 period.

Arthur T. Johnson, associate professor of political science at the University of Maryland Baltimore County, has been named the Lincoln Government Fellow for 1987-88 by the National League of Cities and the Lincoln Institute of Land Policy.

Clifford M. Lytle, professor of political science, University of Arizona, has received the University's first annual Undergraduate Enrichment Award for his distinguished work in undergraduate education.

Edwin Rothman was presented with the Frederick P. Gruenberg Award by the Governmental Research Association for outstanding contributions to governmental research.

Gerard F. Rutan, professor, department of political science, Western Washington University, has been awarded the Donner Medal in Canadian Studies at the ninth biennial convention of the Association for Canadian Studies in the United States. The award ceremony, to honor outstanding contributions to Canadian Studies, took place in Montreal in October.

Edward Weisband, distinguished teaching professor of political science at the State University of New York at Binghamton, was named as one of the top 10 finalists, a gold medalist, in the Professor of the Year competition by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education. Professors are judged on their abilities as teachers, service to their institutions and profession, achievement in teaching and scholarship, and achievement by former students.

Aaron Wildavsky, professor of political science at the University of California, Berkeley, has been appointed a Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar for 1987-88. He will travel to five institutions: the Universities of Connecticut, Santa Clara, and Illinois at Chicago; Allegheny College; and the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

In Memoriam

Alan Fraser Davies

Alan Fraser Davies, professor of politics at the University of Melbourne, died suddenly on August 18, 1987. He was 62. He had arranged soon to commence an early retirement to concentrate on his writing. Alan Davies had strong links with the academic community in North America. He had worked for a time at the University of Alberta, Edmonton. He was a founding member of the council of the International Society of Political Psychology. And he had been one of the earliest incumbents of the prestigious Chair of Australian Studies at Harvard University.

Alan Davies was a graduate of the University of Melbourne, and was appointed to a lectureship there in 1946. He was appointed to the Chair of Politics at Melbourne in 1968.

With his first books, Local Government in Victoria (1951), Politics for Progress (1954), and Australian Democracy (1958), Davies established his reputation as a gifted analyst of national and state politics. His Australian Democracy, a small gem of conscientious, descriptive detail, inspired hunches, and incisive aphorism, remained the standard text on Australian politics for years.

Davies' most influential work, however, transcended Australian politics. His true metier was (following Lasswell) in the analysis of how individuals construct a personal politics, and the demonstration that psychoanalytic theory could provide a systematic means of relating the individual and personal to the social and cultural. While he was never to overlook the dialectic between individual and society, as his Australian Society (edited with Sol Encel, 1965) and Images of Class (1967) make clear, the rich vein of political psychology was to remain his central focus from the late 1950s until his premature death. His books of this period, Private Politics (1966), Essays in Political Sociology (1972), Politics as Work (1973), and Political Passions (1975), culminated in his magisterial masterwork, Skills, Outlooks and Passions: A Psychoanalytic Contribution to the Study of Politics (1980).

Skills, Outlooks and Passions takes three elemental aspects of life—how we work, how we think and perceive, and how we feel—and considers them as the integral components of politics. It is a brilliant work of synthesis, bringing together and juxtaposing the works of others in such a way as to throw new light on all of them, and to suggest new directions that transcend these sources. It is at once a detailed review of applied psychoanalysis over 80 years, a rescue and renovation of classic paradigms, a map for new uses of contemporary theory, and an extraordinary annotated bibliography of life history and politics. It reflects Davies' fascination with the individual's social relations and conviction that Freud and his heirs can be mined for systematic social theory.

Alan Davies was a committed teacher who never lost his enthusiasm for work in the front-line with large undergraduate classes. Even so, seminars and thesis supervision were his forte: he was most comfortable in small circles. There he offered to his students not a narrative (which they could passively receive), but the possibility of dialogue. Students were never pushed or harried, but those who were prepared to engage in the dialogue (which demanded continued reflection and work), rose to him, discovered their own best qualities, and found him an inspirational teacher. With postgraduate students, with colleagues, with anyone whose writing interested him or who came to him with an intellectual problem, he combined the gift of listening with the capacity to inspire. It was an active listening, akin to psychoanalysis. He encouraged people to articulate their projects and problems, to talk them out, to discover for themselves the potentials and impediments. He did not impose solutions, but with a sentence