

Materials Science Students Visit MRS Headquarters

Graduate and undergraduate materials science students, with their professor Mike McHenry (second from right), from Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh visit the Materials Research Society Headquarters.

Several graduate and undergraduate materials science students from Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh visited the Materials Research Society Headquarters in April to learn about the Society, member benefits, and student opportunities. The visitors, all students of Mike McHenry, learned about trends in MRS electronic publishing, new Web site content initiatives, and "Strange Matter"—the science museum project formerly known as Materials MicroWorld. The students also learned how they could participate in news writing for the MRS Bulletin, participate in MRS Meetings and the Graduate Student Award Program, and the MRS/OSA Congressional Science and Engineering Fellowship Program. The students came from all areas of the world and many were coupling their materials degrees with other programs—from archaeology to public policy. MRS

Hendrik Schön Removed as Recipient of MRS's Outstanding Young Investigator Award

The Materials Research Society (MRS) has announced that it has removed Hendrik Schön as a recipient of the Society's 2002 Outstanding Young Investigator Award. This decision was made in view of the findings of the committee appointed by Bell Laboratories to look into the scientific work of Schön. MRS has requested the return of the award, and Schön has returned the prize money to the Society. MRS

JMR

because
important
work
deserves
to be published
quickly

See page 377 and 392
for more information

Over 8,100 Proceedings Papers Now Online For "Members Only"

MRS members have free access to all published proceedings papers from MRS Meetings since the 2000 MRS Spring Meeting. Plus free online access to MRS Bulletin and the MRS Membership Directory.

Go to www.mrs.org and click on "Members Only"

Not a member? Go to www.mrs.org and click on "Join MRS" to become a member today!