The Journal of the History of Biology is devoted to the history of the biological sciences, with additional interest and concern in philosophical and social issues confronting biology. While all historical epochs are welcome, particular attention has been paid in recent years to developments during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The Journal is now published three times each year. It serves the working biologist who needs a full understanding of the historical and philosophical bases of the field as well as serving the historian of science interested in following developments in the biological sciences.
