"My test for the worthiness of a scholarly journal is the number of times I ask students to read articles in its pages. By that standard Modern China scores very high indeed. The journal's editors consistently focus one's attention upon the front edge of contemporary scholarship. It is rare to receive an issue that does not contain at least one article that belongs on everyone's syllabus for the serious study of modern China."

—Frederic Wakeman, University of California, Berkeley

MODERN CHINA

An International Quarterly of History and Social Science

Edited by PHILIP C.C. HUANG, University of California, Los Angeles

MODERN CHINA offers Asia scholars a responsive, international forum for intellectually rigorous, ideologically objective investigation into all aspects of the modern Chinese experience.

Contributors to MODERN CHINA include historians, political scientists, anthropologists, sociologists, economists, literary scholars, and many others who seek to gain a deeper understanding of the on-going Chinese Revolutionary process—its implications for the Chinese people and the world at large.

Special thematic issues of MODERN CHINA, published regularly, explore single topics, issues, or problems of concern to the Asian specialist in depth.

"Any library that supports courses on recent Chinese history or politics should take Modern China. . ."
