Malabar in Asian Trade 1740-1800

ASHIN DAS GUPTA

A study of the decline in the medieval trading pattern and its later reorganization in the eighteenth century along the coast of Malabar in south-west India. Professor Das Gupta explores for the first time the world of the Indian merchant and discusses the role of European trading companies, making detailed use of the archives of the Dutch East India Company. 55s. net

Land Tenure in Village Ceylon

G. OBEYESEKERE

A detailed study of the pattern of land tenure and the resulting social structure in Madagama, a village in South Ceylon. The author examines a model of tenure based on the traditional Sinhalese marriage and inheritance laws, and the modifications caused by land shortage, British rule and the development of a cash economy. 70s. net

Poems of al-Mutanabbi

A Selection with Introduction, Translations and Notes by
A. J. ARBERRY

Al-Mutanabbi, though universally considered the greatest of all Arab poets, has seldom been translated or discussed outside Arab countries. This book contains a selection of his poems, in the original and in translation. Professor Arberry introduces them with a discussion on al-Mutanabbi's life, style, influence and critics. 55s. net

JOURNAL OF ASIAN HISTORY

Edited by
Denis Sinor

Volume 1: 2 Hefte. 1967. Ca. 192 pages, $8.00/DM 32.—.

This new periodical is intended to fill a gap which both general historians and orientalists have long felt to exist in the coverage of Asian Studies. There is at present no scholarly journal specializing in the history of Asia. Highly technical contributions to some aspect of Asian history appear regularly in highly specialized journals which, as a rule, are not habitually consulted by historians, whilst historical journals carry but few articles dealing with the non-Western world.

The Journal of Asian History intends to cover historical research on any period and all the regions of Asia with the exception of the Ancient Near East. The word "history" will be taken in its broadest sense, comprising all the disciplines of the social sciences and humanities when concerned with the elucidation of the past.

It is hoped that the Journal will serve not only the specialists but also the growing number of historians who in their research and in their teaching are sometimes painfully aware of the difficulty of finding comprehensive, comprehensible and up-to-date presentations of topics taken from Asian history. For their sake the Journal will regularly carry review-articles and selected and annotated bibliographies, both American and European.

The Journal is conceived as an international organ. It will publish articles in English, French, German and Russian and intends to serve as a link between the various schools of history and of orientalism.

The Editor is Professor of Uralic and Altaic Studies and of History at Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana. He is Chairman of its Asian Studies Program and Director of the Uralic and Altaic Language and Area Center. He will be helped in his task by an efficient administrative apparatus and a Faculty the expertise of which covers wide fields of Asian Studies.
