

A call to conscience...
especially the American conscience

House Divided

Poverty, Race,
Religion and the Family of Man

By THOMAS and
MARGARET MELADY

Thomas Patrick Melady and his wife, the former Margaret Judith Badum, have spent most of the time since their marriage in 1961 visiting and studying many parts of the Third World. Dr. Melady, formerly Professor of Afro-Asian Affairs at Seton Hall University, is now U.S. Ambassador to the Republic of Burundi.

Drawing on firsthand observations and insights, Dr. and Mrs. Melady now offer America a means of playing a strategic role in overcoming and healing the wounds inflicted on the human family by poverty, race and distorted religion. It is a way "to reach a world which is not a utopia but which will provide opportunities in an atmosphere of relative tranquility."

HOUSE DIVIDED is an exciting challenge to the mind and heart of every thoughtful American . . . indispensable reading for all who hope for peace and reconciliation in a divided world.

The New Nations in the United Nations, 1960–1967

DAVID A. KAY. 'In what must be one of the least noted revolutions in modern international affairs, 33 new nations entered the U.N. between 1960 and 1967. Here Kay offers an outstanding appraisal of the immediate consequences. . . one of those infrequent scholarly monographs which should appeal to laymen as well as specialists.'—Library Journal. $10.00

Population, Migration, and Urbanization in Africa

WILLIAM A. HANCE. 'Hance has done it again. In the tradition of his classic The Geography of Modern Africa, he has marshalled an immense quantity of data to support his view that Africa has a population problem, which contrasts with the general opinion that Africa has little population pressure on its land resources. . . It may well be the most important book for the general scholar to be published on Africa this year.'—Library Journal. $15.00

The Mourides of Senegal

The Political and Economic Organization of an Islamic Brotherhood

DONAL B. CRUISE O'BRIEN

The Mouride brotherhood has some 700,000 followers who serve their politically and economically powerful religious leaders in return for the promise of a heavenly reward. Dr O'Brien suggests that the material advantages of membership, and the benefits that have permitted an African people to adapt themselves to the changes introduced by the French, have hitherto been undervalued. His study will be of interest to political scientists, historians, and sociologists, and it contributes to our understanding of the evolution of African societies in the modern world. 8 plates

The Nominal and Verbal Systems of Fula

D. W. ARNOTT

Fula is a highly inflectional language with over twenty different noun classes, and a complicated verbal system which includes a distinction between Active, Middle, and Passive. This work gives a newly comprehensive and co-ordinated account of the nominal system, as it operates in a little-studied dialect of northern Nigeria. The verbal system is also studied in detail. £6/10/-

Politics in Ghana 1946-1960

DENNIS AUSTIN

Dennis Austin's study, which spans the most formative period of the new republic of Ghana, draws on his ten years' teaching experience there. When first published in 1964, International Affairs said it would be 'recognized as the definitive study of modern Ghanaian politics, as well as an essential source-book for future historians'. It is now reprinted as an Oxford Paperback 25/- Royal Institute of International Affairs

The Cameroon Federation

Political Integration in a Fragmentary Society

WILLARD R. JOHNSON

The author shows how the 1961 federation of the British and French Cameroons attempted to integrate a highly fragmented society representing every social cleavage found in Africa, including disparate and bilingual colonial legacies. 1 map £6 Princeton University Press

The Politics of Tradition

Continuity and Change in Northern Nigeria 1946-1966

C. S. WHITAKER JR

In this intensive and detailed analysis of the politics of Northern Nigeria between 1946 and 1966, Professor Whitaker demonstrates that a traditional society can, and often does, carry over many traditional institutions into its new, modern society. £6/10/- Princeton University Press

God: Ancestor or Creator?

H. SAWYERR

A detailed examination of the concept of God as it appears among three major West African peoples—the Akan of Ghana, the Yoruba of Nigeria and the Mende of Sierra Leone. While embracing the work of previous scholars in the field, Canon Sawyerr extends his own inquiry into the very bases of belief as they appear in language, in usage and in custom.

The Struggle for the School

The interaction of Missionary, Government and Nationalist aims in the development of formal education in Kenya

J. ANDERSON

Three related themes are explored in this work: the lack of relevance of the alien school system inherited at independence; the importance of the struggle which took place over the control of the schools in the history of the independence movement; the educational dilemma which faces the new nations now that independence has been achieved: schools are the focal point of competitive tensions yet they also promise ordered and rapid development.

NEW FROM YALE

Resolving Conflict in Africa

The Fermeda Workshop

edited by Leonard W. Doob

The Fermeda Workshop, held in August 1969, was the first attempt to employ a modified form of sensitivity training in an international setting. Three Yale professors brought together at the Fermeda Hotel, in the South Tyrol, six Somalis, six Kenyans, six Ethiopians, and four American trainers to see whether the use of T-groups would enable the Africans to comprehend more fully and propose solutions to the costly border disputes between their countries. Here is the story of what happened as seen through the eyes of three African participants and the American sponsors and trainers.

Libyan Independence and the United Nations

A Case of Planned Decolonization

by Adrian Pelt

with a foreword by U Thant

The peaceful transition of the former Italian colony of Libya to independence in 1950-51 is a fascinating United Nations success story. Adrian Pelt served as the U.N. Commissioner in Libya during this period and helped the Libyans prepare a constitution and establish a new national governmental structure. His book records in detail the many political, economic, and social problems inherent in state-building that had to be solved in the course of his mission.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the businessman, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
